VOLUME 69

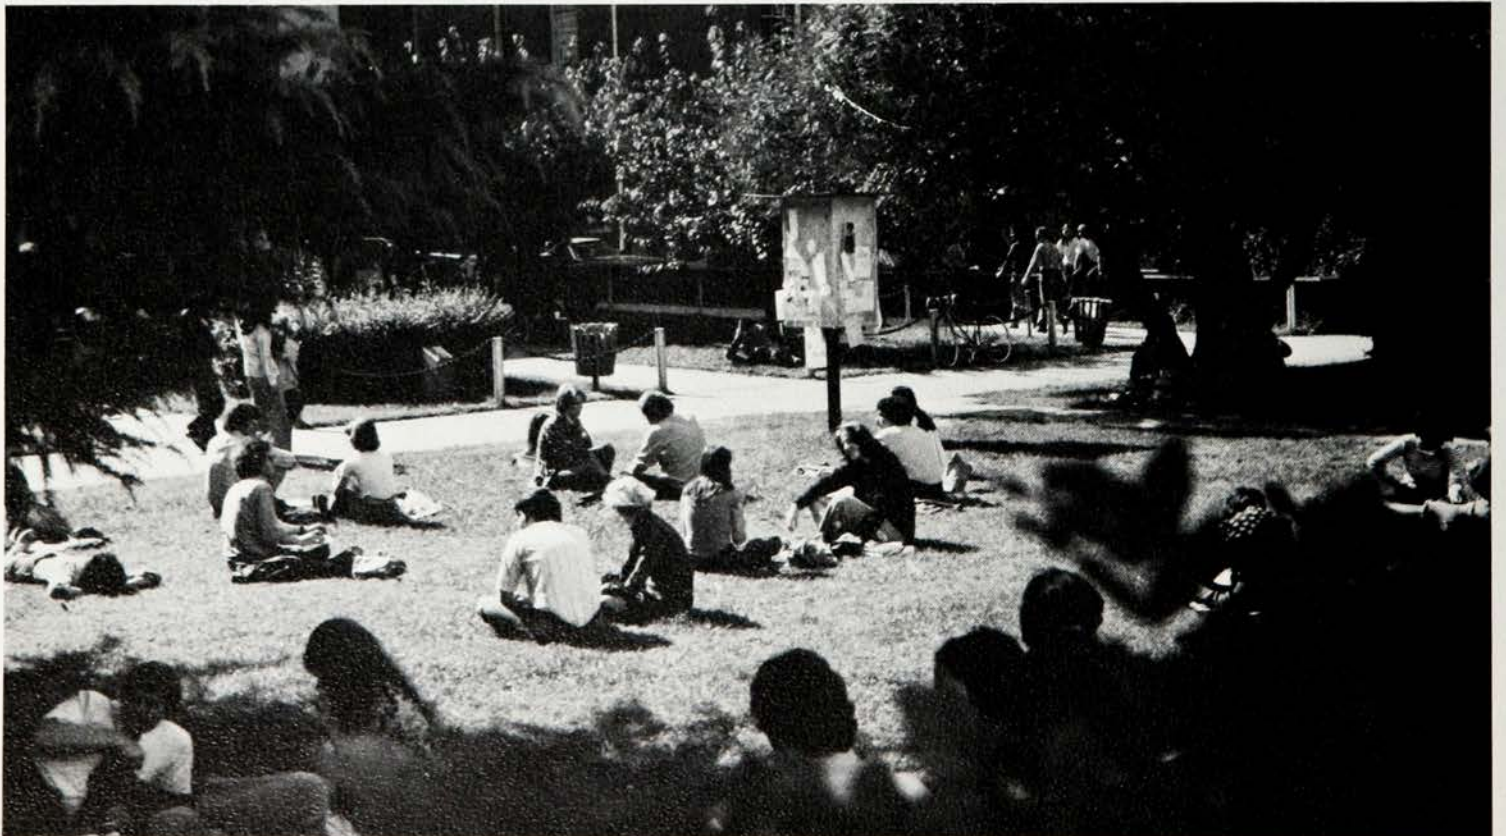

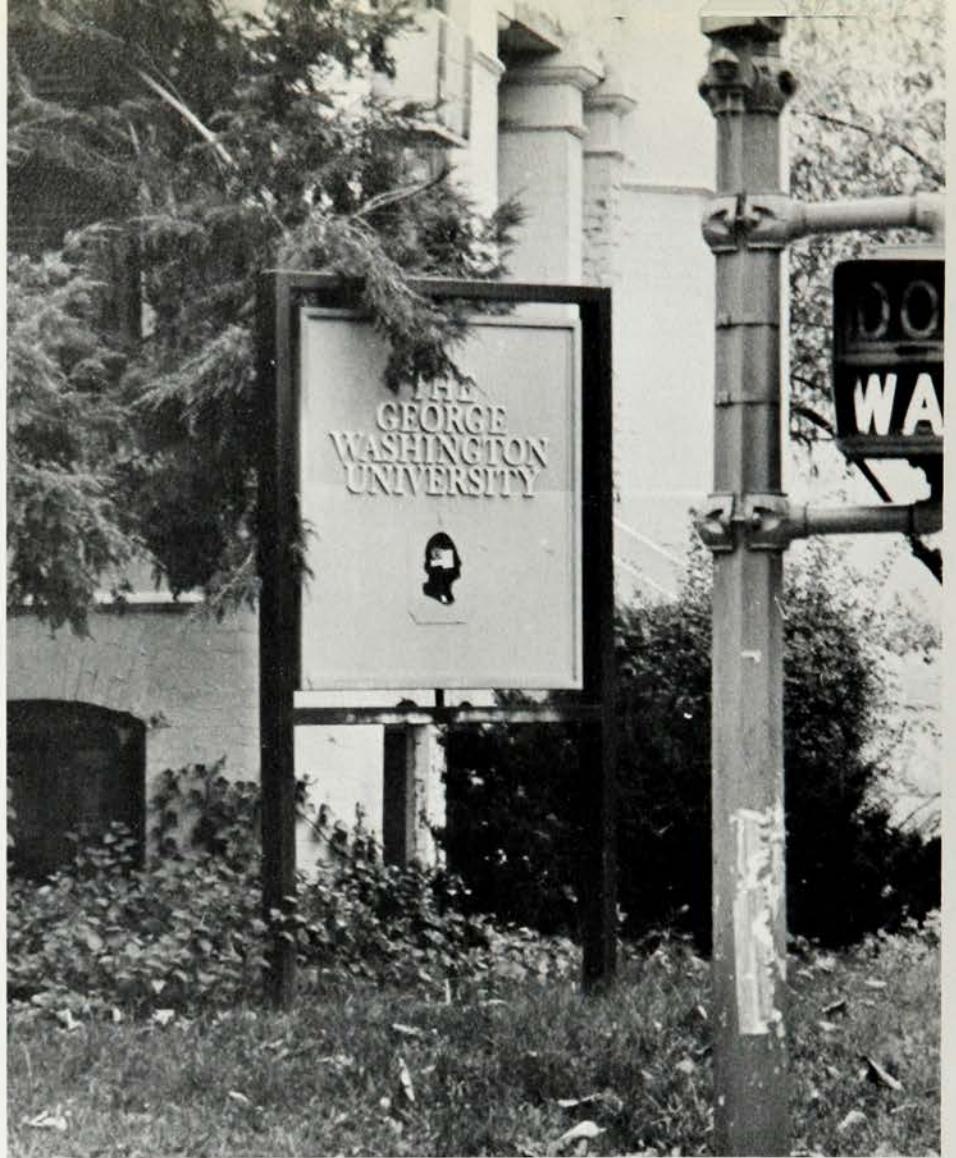

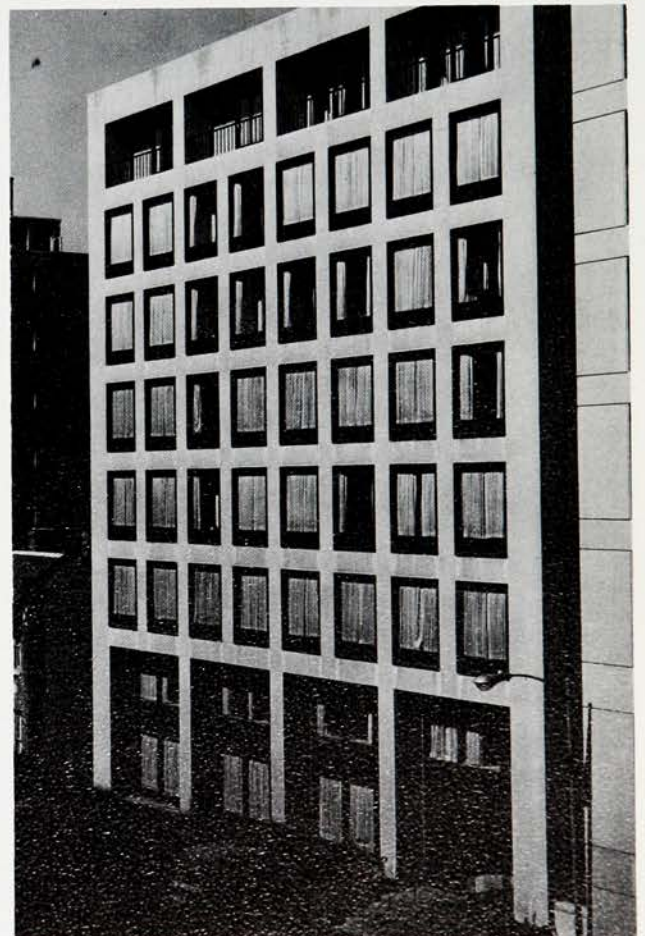

The GW campus is just one small part of the entire city, and during a student's course of time here it tends to take on a particular dimension of its own. To the average passerby all the buildings and town-houses and hustle-bustle of activity are no different than anywhere else in Washington.

For those of us who have walked these same paths for four years — there is a big difference. The street corners and the crowds and the various buildings carry with them a special significance.

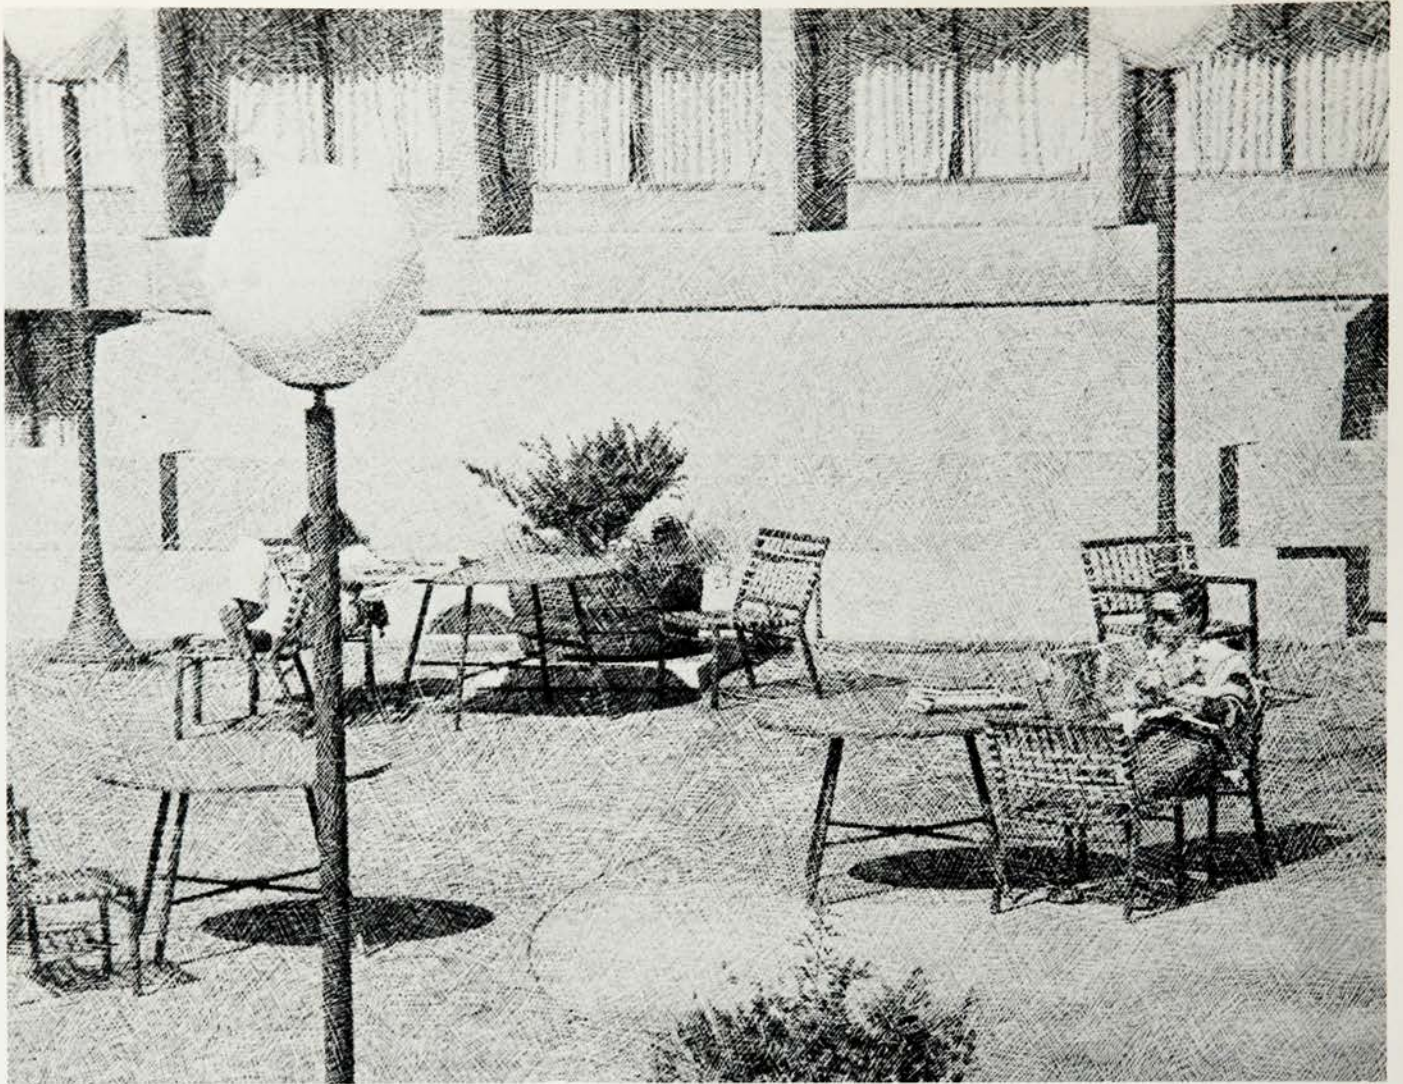

Probably the most important building at GW is Rice Hall. It's the home of the administration, where decisions and policies effecting every student are made. Aside from being synonymous with administration, Rice Hall carries on additional functions: check cashing, housing problems, registration information, and the place in name where you pay your bills.

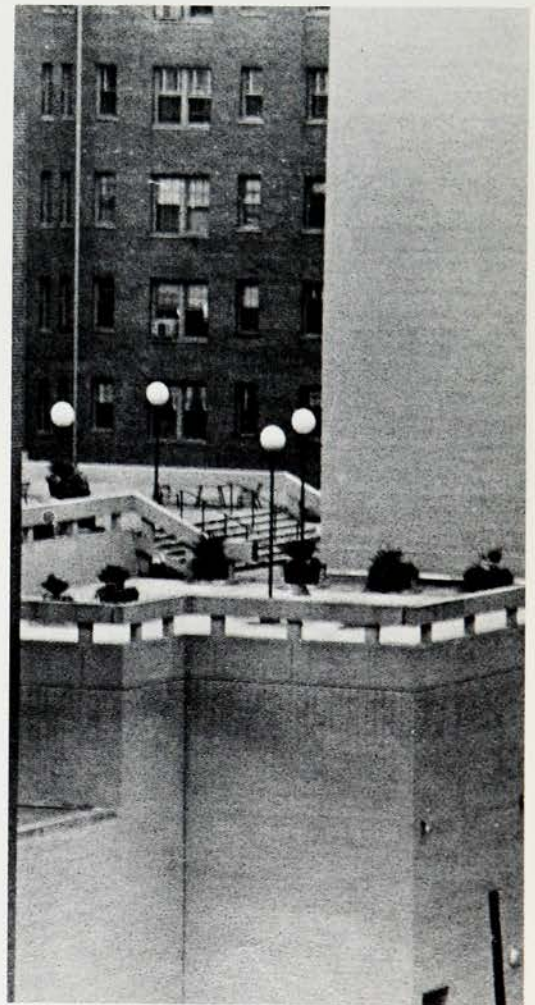

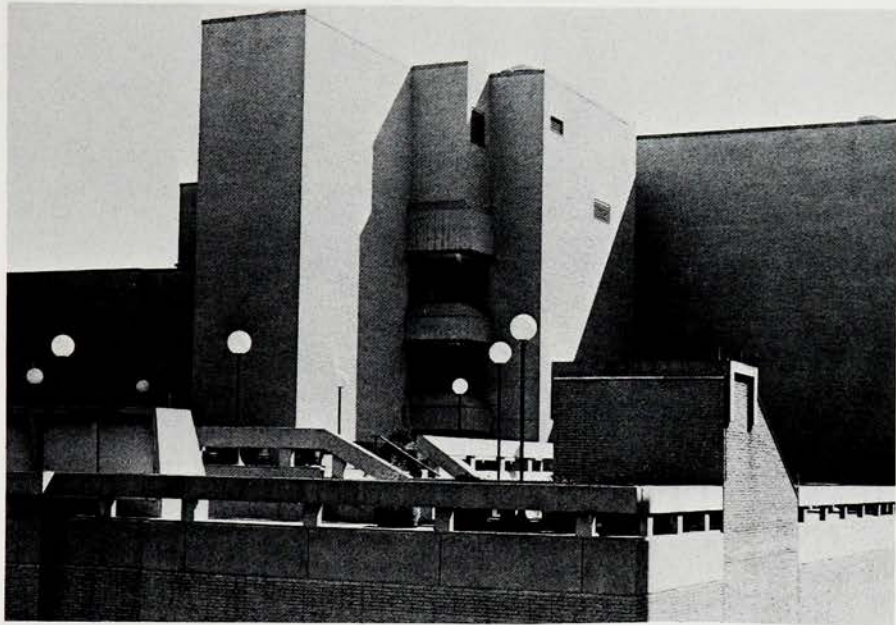

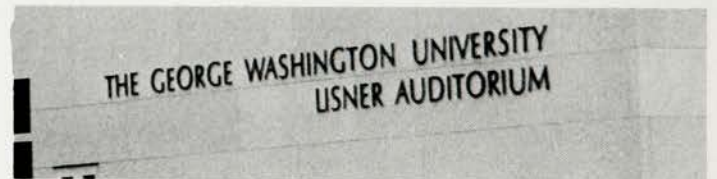

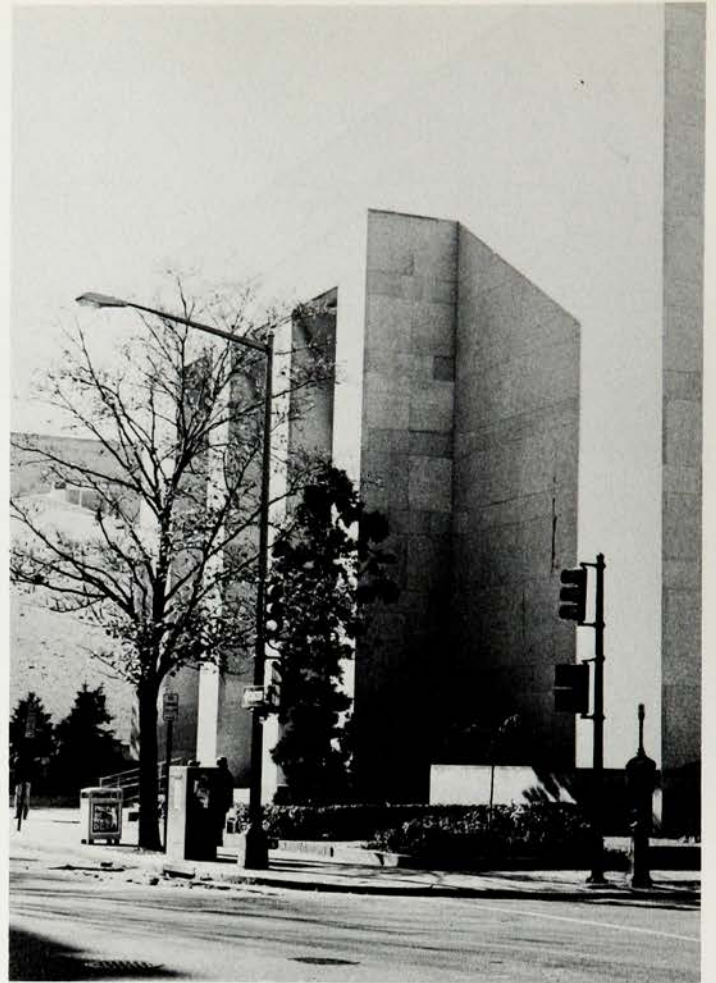

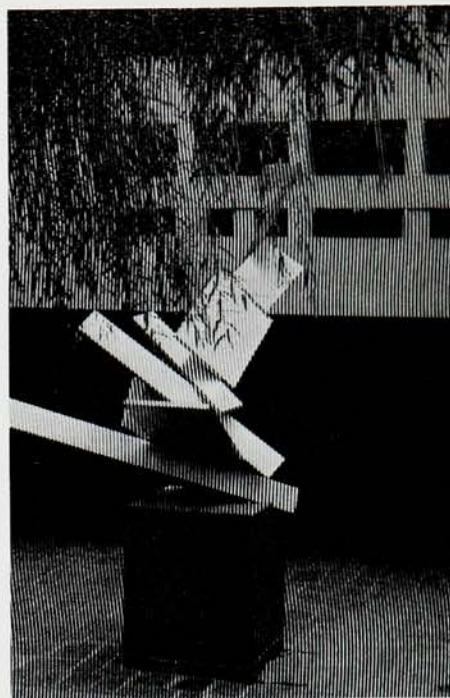

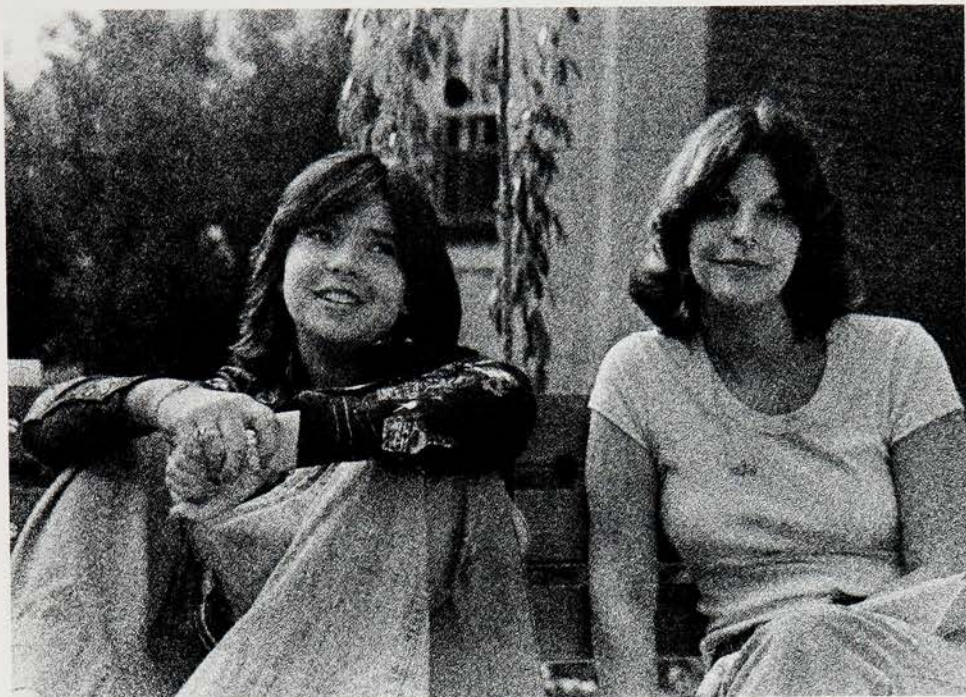

It's not hard to understand why the Marvin Center is the heart of campus activities. Making available facilities for dining, lounging, studying, conversing, and meeting — the Marvin Center is the student center. The Ratskellar, the university newspaper, the yearbook, and various other clubs and organizations — political and non-political, educational and informational, social and otherwise, all make their homes here.

The Marvin Center is where every Thursday or Friday night a movie is playing in the third floor ballroom. And it's where you go when all else fails (that usually means your wallet) on Fridays and Saturdays — to see whatever band or activity is playing in the Rat. And for boredom, pleasure or just plain sport there is bowling, pool, ping-pong and even pinball.

The Library is clearly the most used building on campus. For those who study nightly, there is the mad rush to gain a study room. The winners (who know the best time to get there) enjoy the privacy of the study room while the losers choose between separate cubicles or join the masses in the large study lounges. Winner or loser, the silence is deafening, distractions are many. Studying tends to be the number one sport, the single largest activity on campus.

For political science and economics majors, C Building is the center of their entire college education. Here are the large C-100 and C-101 — where those who took polisci 5 and/or 6 can remember the many detailed lectures of Doctors Gyorgy and Wayne. For incoming freshmen, these rooms are impressive, reflecting the quality education they are hoping to obtain.

The Smith Center is a welcomed addition to the University. It should bring about a common gathering point for students and for sports. It will be the home of the basketball team and for the first time a common house for all sports — rather than scattered about accommodations. Hopefully, the Smith Center will become the number two meeting place on campus (number one will always be the classroom.)

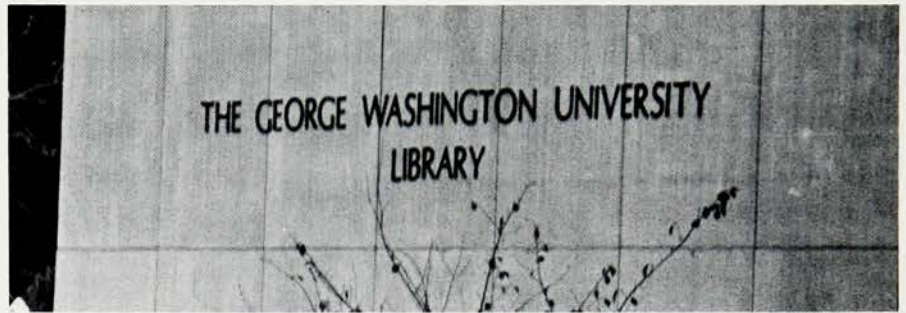

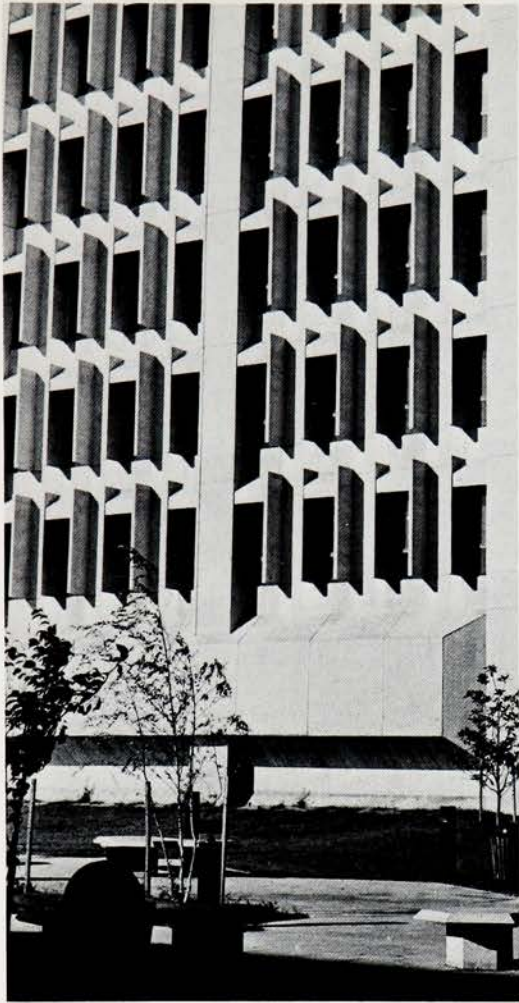

Continuing down G street there is Leo's and the old Grant Schoolhouse, Monroe Hall, the Government Building, and Quigley's. And Frat Row, Bell, Lisner and Stuart Hall — homes of urban affairs, english and journalism, and the computer center of frustration and hastles and hamsters that roll about the floor in plastic balls.

And finally the Quad, the place where those who dare to go about and lounge around, actually go about and lounge around.

VICE PRESIDENT WILLIAM P. SMITH

"People say that students are not involved anymore. I do not believe it. I think the type of involvement is just different."

Vice-President Smith

The Office of Vice President for Student Affairs has two main functions. One is to coordinate the development and application of student life policies on campus. The other is to oversee student services offered through the Marvin Center, Counseling Center, Housing Office, Student Health Service, Career Services, Educational Opportunity Program, International Students' Advisor, and an office directly related to the theme of this Cherry Tree issue, Student Activities.

I think of student activities on campus in a broad sense, not limited to centrally-programmed social, cultural and recreational events, but also involving student participation in campus policy committees, in community service projects, campus political organizations, religious activities, leadership training programs, intramural sports, campus publications, and so on through the entire span of group activities out of class.

Student activities take place here among a very diverse student population. G.W. students range from full-time resident undergraduates in Thurston Hall to mid-career government executives commuting parttime to Building C for a Master's degree; from public school students from the inner city to private prep school graduates from suburbia; from students from more than a hundred foreign countries, to hundreds of housewives from Beltway homes commuting in for career re-entry programs.

For some of these diverse students, campus activities outside the classrooms clearly have little relevance. For others, campus life represents an interesting and valued aspect of college attendance. A few of these latter are graduate or professional students, but in the main they are undergraduates, and most often, full-time resident undergraduates. Many of these report both intellectual and social rewards from a portion of time invested in campus activities.

If I were asked what particular out-of-class activity seems to bring the most substantial rewards both to the participants and the University community, it would be service on one of the numerous student faculty committees that shape campus policy. In the give-and-take of such committees, where issues can range from equality of educational opportunity to student records access policies, student participants can develop, through the process of debate, committee skills useful for a lifetime.

In committee service, opportunities arise to test intellectual concepts from the classroom. The feeling of anonymity experienced by undergraduates new to any large university (I remember it vividly!) disappears quickly for students involved in committee efforts. The debate of issues by those who know they will be directly affected by the outcome brings both intellect and emotion into play ... a combination that reinforces learning to a degree not ordinarily reachable through reflection alone.

As for the overall activities picture, there are those who still lament the passing of an earlier-day campus life. Activities in most major urban universities no longer involve the elaborate homecomings, winter weekends, and massive parades and concerts of those times. The student bodies of institutions like ours have become far too heterogeneous to support such events. Then as soon as the military draft ceased, that other notable feature of past campus life, the mass demonstration, disappeared as well.

Today's student bodies support a style of campus life that suits their own needs. They have developed a greatly-expanded variety of smaller-scale, more-specialized activities. One of these can now be found on this campus to match almost any student's out-of-class interest, whether that interest lies in campus policy development, German literature, hospital volunteer work, cross-country skiing, or support of a candidate for public office. To me the G.W. campus life of the Seventies is much the richer for this new variety in student activities.

MARVIN CENTER STAFF

Boris Bell, Director

The role of the Marvin Center's director and supportive staff is charted in the building use policies which state the Center's purpose and related functions. These policies view the Center as providing a wide variety of services important to the daily needs of all members of the University community and affording an atmosphere for the encouragement, development and support of a cultural, intellectual, recreational and social program. In effect, the Center might best be regarded as an all purpose community center, bringing together approximately 10,000 people per school day – representative of both the campus and Washington communities – and providing a backdrop for multiple forms of interaction.

In this interface, the Center staff finds itself working with the Program Board in the implementation of campus programming, coordinating the efforts of the various management teams responsible for building services, advising students, faculty, administrators, alumni, and non-University groups in the planning of their activities in the building – and in the process, servicing same – and keeping the building properly maintained and comfortable for the building users. Included, also, among these accommodations is a function unique to college centers around the country; one which has placed the Center in the role of a library-like facility despite the recent emergence on campus of an excellent library. The continuing student use of Center areas for study purposes has had the effect of limiting the building's versatility and has complicated the Center's effort to more successfully address its originally stated goals and purposes.

While the work of the Center staff is largely geared to facilitating building activities and administering the policies governing building usage, a large role entails an important coordinating effort with the Center's broadly representative, policy making, Governing Board. In this regard, opportunities are provided for the student-dominated Board to review the effectiveness of the Center, recommend budget and building use policies to the University President, assign office space, and update and improve upon the building's services. Staff contributions to this role entail the provision of resource information important to the development of such recommendations and actions, keeping the Board informed of the Center's changing use requirements and operating patterns, and implementation of approved policies and service developments.

These involvements with the Governing Board have represented a special challenge to the staff and have clearly indicated that the various constituencies of the University can work productively and amicably together on matters important to the quality of life on the campus.

Students who have worked together to plan and execute an event or have simply sat down with others and exchanged views and opinions have always come away with something new, something extra learned. Many students attend George Washington University for four years and never fully understand how a very important aspect of the university, Student Affairs, works. This division of the University is important because there is more to a college education than academics. The University offers a variety of programs, committees, and activities and thus provides various areas for students to participate and become involved.

The Vice President for Student Affairs, William P. Smith, sits atop a well coordinated and designed system that provides for student participation and input in many non-academic areas. His task is a difficult one, encompassing many levels of student life. His office, and the many dedicated people who work within the Division of Student Affairs prove just how much more there is to a college education aside from the academics.

Within the Division of Student Affairs the Dean of Students, Marianne Phelps, oversees a host of university services including housing, counseling, the international students' advisor, and the educational opportunity program. These programs are designed to assist students in adapting to college life.

Assistant to the Vice President for Student Affairs, John Perkins, works closely with Vice President Smith and serves as the Executive Secretary to the Non-Academic Judicial System. This court system, composed of three all student courts (Residence Hall Court, Traffic Court, and Student Court) provides for student input on various levels of student life. Two additional judicial committees, Student Faculty Committee on Appeals and the Committee on the Judiciary, also provide for student input in decision-making and in the writing and implementing of rules, procedures, rights and guidelines for student life.

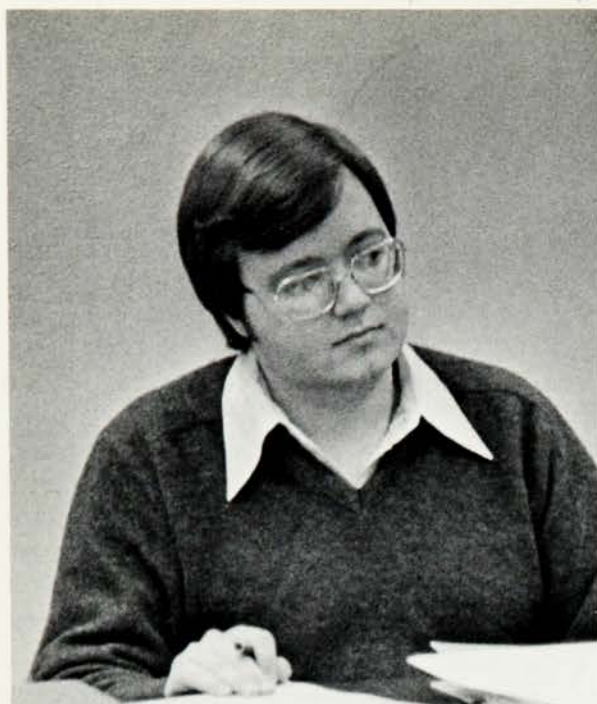

Under the Director of the University Center, Boris Bell, the Governing Board of faculty and students establish rules and procedures governing the student center. Room allocation for the many clubs and organizations is assigned and other governing duties attended to.

Under the Director of Student Activities, Dr. David Speck, a handful of administrators work on various projects and areas of student activities.

Dr. Speck himself attends various committees, (Joint Committee of Faculty and Students, the Publications Committee, Parking Committee and others) each dealing with a specific area of student life. The Office of Student Activities formally recognizes student clubs, allocates funds, and supervises a variety of special projects such as Parent's Weekend, the Leadership Conference, Project Visibility and Impact Sponsors.

The Program Board, a student elected board of students, operates within student activities and plans events throughout the year. The weekly movies, entertainment in the Ratskellar, dances and this year's Kingfish Concert are just some of the many events sponsored by the board.

The Student Volunteer Action Council (SVAC) oversees several volunteer efforts such as coordinating commuter and home transportation, blood drives and a book exchange.

The Hatchet semi-weekly newspaper, Cherry Tree yearbook, and Rock Creek literary magazine enable students to express themselves in writing and in the planning and executing of a periodical.

There are many other clubs, activities, and committees, each providing a line of input, participation, and involvement with other students, faculty and administrators.

In a sense, the failure to realize and utilize the Division of Student Affairs is a failure to obtain a full, well rounded education. The opportunity to become involved, to participate in the inner workings of the University, and to interact with others should not be passed up. The ability to work with others and to achieve goals together is best learned through experience. The Division of Student Affairs makes this learning process possible.

The 1976 Cherry Tree is dedicated to the many students, administrators and faculty members who work together for the benefit of the entire university community.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM

Academic institutions exist for the transmission of knowledge, the pursuit of truth, the development of students, and the general well-being of society. Free inquiry and free expression are indispensable to the attainment of these goals. As members of the academic community, students should be encouraged to develop the capacity for critical judgment and to engage in a sustained and independent search for truth.

Freedom to teach and freedom to learn are inseparable facets of academic freedom. The freedom to learn depends upon appropriate opportunities and conditions in the classroom, on campus, and in the larger community. Students should exercise their freedom with responsibility.

The responsibility to secure and to respect general conditions conducive to the freedom to learn is shared by all members of the academic community. The University has a duty to develop policies and procedures which provide and safeguard this freedom.

STUDENT ACTIVITIES OFFICE

Student activities, as is the case at many colleges and universities, is a catch-all expression for almost everything involving students outside the classroom. A student activities office, if one sentence descriptions make any sense, concerns itself with promoting those outside experiences as positive and learning in nature.

While student activities are usually not viewed as part of the curriculum, it is obvious that the experiences students have in this area often mean the difference between a truly satisfying education, or just a satisfactory one.

A key ingredient in the students' level of satisfaction is what the student is willing to invest in insuring it will happen, and far too often it seems that the students would prefer to wait for someone to bring the activities to them. In our Student Activities Office, we strongly believe, however, that the programs and activities which are conducted should be, in large part, a function of how much the students are willing to do. To this end, we work hard, sometimes harder than if we did the activities ourselves, to provide the setting and the opportunity for students to develop, conduct and participate in their activities. Sometimes that facilitation involves major investments — of money and staff — to help a program off the ground, but it always stresses the ability of students to determine and produce their own activities. The result, when successful, is a product that is as enriching in its conclusions as the effort made to produce it. I hope that there are more experiences like that, and that our students leave truly satisfied.

The Role of Student Government

by Beverly Nance Roberts

After the campus activism of the 60's, apathy took hold and today people seem more interested in the World Series, than which presidential candidate to choose from in the next election. Now is the time for G.W.U. to counter this trend and give Student Government another chance. It is a chance, because if Student government becomes another social organization or simply more red tape to wade through, it will be worthless.

What should Student Government's function be? There are many options. Many governments hand out parking fines and disciplinary punishments. Others have higher purposes but little clout. Important resolutions are discussed and passed, ending up in the waste basket due to a powerless Student Government. For G.W.U. either of roads would be wasteful and useless.

The Student Government should be many things. It should be a corporation funded with the same monies presently acquired from students when registering. As a corporation, it would have certain rights and privileges. The most important right being that the University can not stifle the Student Government by simply cutting off funds. This point is extremely important in case the students' interests do not coincide with the University's.

The Student Government should have full discretion in the allocation of its monies. The Government should fund the bodies presently known as the Program Board and Governing Board. All the other organizations, groups, and clubs should be funded in the same way. In this respect, the Student Government's duty is to coordinate and cosponsor events.

The major purpose of a student government is, in many ways, of paramount importance: a liason between the administration and the student. In this respect, the government is not merely a grievance board, but rather a group to advise and suggest courses of action both to the President and the Board of Trustees.

A student government should not involve itself in the specifics of academic policy. The potential conflict is too glearing. A student government should provide a forum in which students may address themselves to such issues as: the university's relationship to the community or a discussion of campus facilities. Any definitive statement should, however, require a student referendum.

To the extent that general university funds are utilized for such activities, student's as a whole should have the right to evaluate and determine such expenditures. Many student activities should be financed on a priority basis — the student paying for what he wants to get.

Essentially, a student government is an opportunity for responsible self determination in those areas in which the administration and faculty, with their reorganized responsibilities and advantages in dealing with overall questions of academic and administrative policy, need not play a central role.

LOOKING BACK

by T. James Ranney

When you are involved in student activities the most discouraging times are when you are subjected to the inevitable criticism that comes with the job. Whether you are involved in the making of a yearbook, a newspaper, a constitution or the programming of student activities, you are at some time, somewhere asked: why this? why that? how come? why did? and the saddest phrase of all: if I were doing it I would have . . .

Those who criticize the final product rarely have any idea of what goes into its making. Critics can be found on every street corner but the better men and women are those who dare to cross the street. This is not to say all criticism is wrong and unjustified; criticism can be constructive and bring about better performance. At the same time however, over criticism can be destructive and cause those who do all the work to leave it undone.

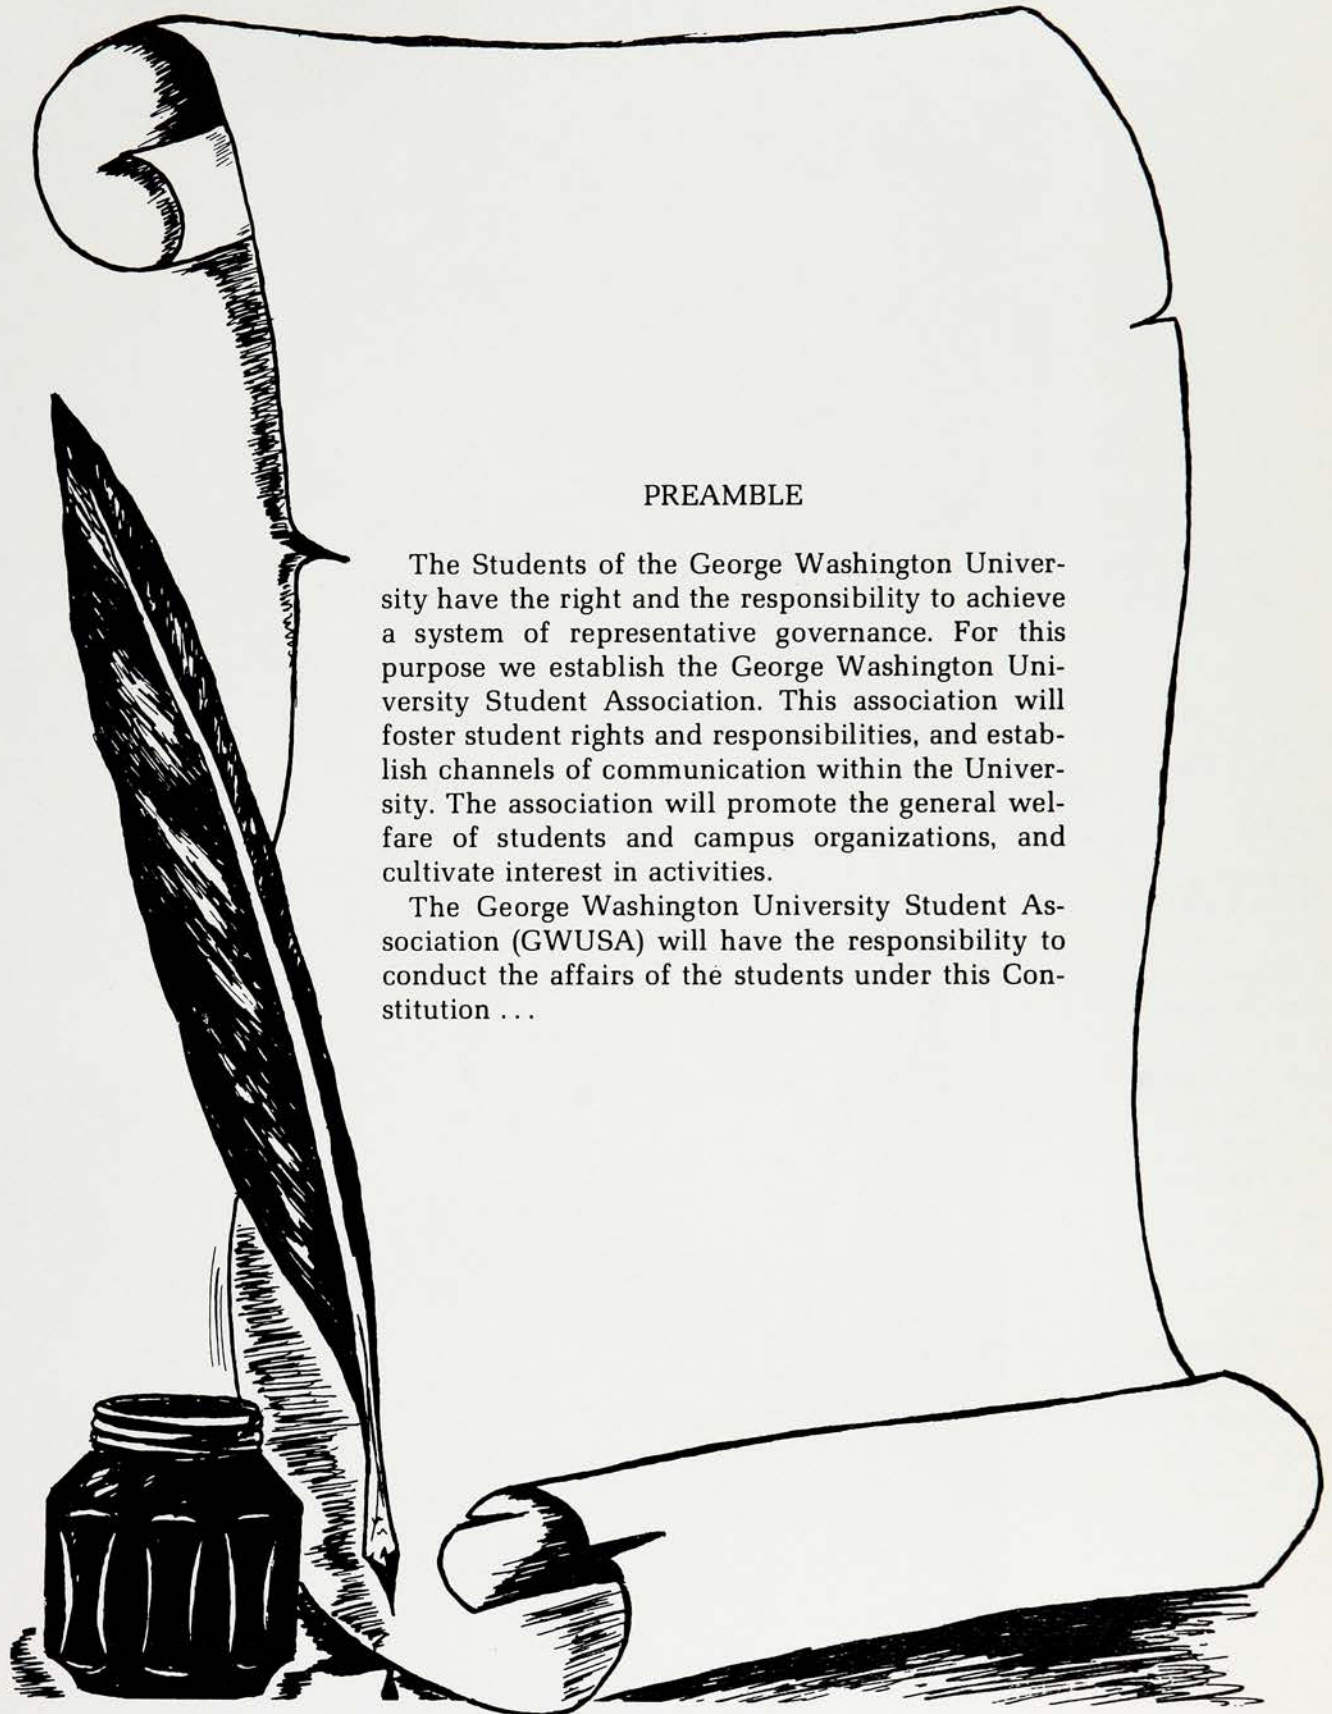

There is probably always a better way to do something, but usually not enough people to get it done. Lack of support usually means a compromise and a result that falls short of potential. If a critic dislikes the results, perhaps he failed to offer his own support; perhaps he never gave it a chance. We get the kind of student activities we deserve at GW and college life is only what we make it.

To those who criticized but never lifted a finger to help all of us to help ourselves, there is little to be said. But those who tried and strived in their own way to do something, to achieve a goal, they have come further than the others and they are the true leaders. These people have learned something that cannot be taught in the classroom or read in the text book. And if they continue on and contribute rather than sit back and criticize, they will always continue to learn.

To the students who made student activities at George Washington work — your reward was in the doing and in the seeing of the final product. You can remember the meetings, the compromises, and the many hours that it took to get things done. You took part in something that was very important to many people, and you made it work. And despite all the criticism you never gave up. Someday, when you are putting your energy into bigger and better things, you will look back and remember and be proud. But think: what have the critics to look back upon?

HOW IT WOULD READ ...

PREAMBLE

The Students of the George Washington University have the right and the responsibility to achieve a system of representative governance. For this purpose we establish the George Washington University Student Association. This association will foster student rights and responsibilities, and establish channels of communication within the University. The association will promote the general welfare of students and campus organizations, and cultivate interest in activities.

The George Washington University Student Association (GWUSA) will have the responsibility to conduct the affairs of the students under this Constitution ...

Each year the International Students Society sponsors an international night of food and music. This year's gala event included exotic foods and the return of the Trinidad Steel Band.

The society is designed to bring together students of all backgrounds and nations — to share their experiences with others. Membership is open to all interested university students, faculty members and administrators.

ALPHA KAPPA PSI PROFESSIONAL BUSINESS SOCIETY

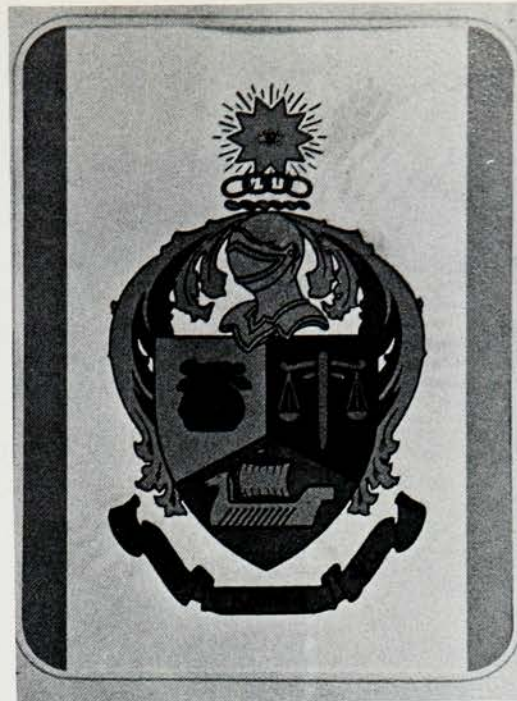

Our chapter has three goals: to make our organization viable, meet our objectives' of allowing membership interaction with local business and government leaders and with each other, and help the School of Government and Business Administration grow and flourish.

Alpha Kappa Psi has more than obtained these goals through the work of its membership by sponsoring luncheons, meetings and other social events.

The pride we hold for our chapter is evidenced by our mutual devotion and respect to each other.

PLACE: HENRY'S CASTLE AT CHINON, FRANCE

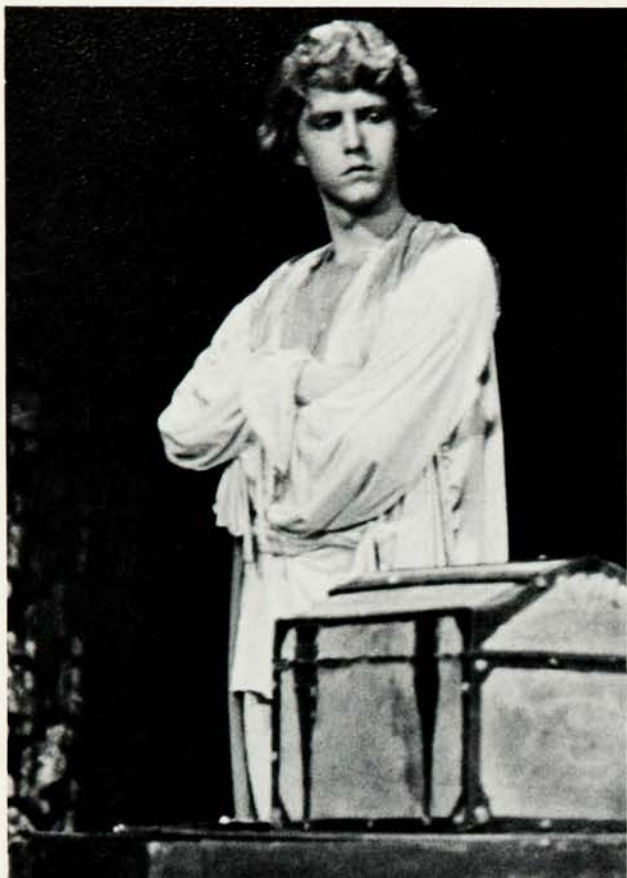

Directed by Paul Parady

"For me, Lion In Winter has been one of the most valuable educational and theatrical experiences I have gone through. The difficulties involved in playing two roles has been a real challenge to me as an actor.

"GW students are very responsive to the theatre – and for good reason: our facilities are equal to any university theatre in Washington. Our costumes alone are of professional quality and hand tailored.

"I came from a small school theatrical environment, but even here, students will stop you on the street and offer criticism or compliments. That's what makes it all worthwhile."

John Pruessner – Henry II, King of England & Richard Lionhearted in the 1975 production of The Lion In Winter.

GW Buys White House!

GW vice-president Charles Diehl announced Thursday that GW has bought the White House from the U.S. Government for use as student housing.

Diehl said the University would begin immediately to renovate the structure, using money donated by GW alumnus William R. Monty. Diehl announced that the building would henceforth be known as Monty Hall.

President Gerald Ford, who will be forced out of the building by the GW move, said, "Betty and I have been looking for a new house for a long time, and with the children all gone off to school now, it's about time we moved into a smaller place." Sources close to the President indicated that he and the First Lady "have their hearts set" on a condominium in Gaithersburg.

Diehl said GW "had been looking to acquire the Executive Mansion for some time," and had learned of the building's availability through a classified ad in the Washington Post advertising a "lg. home, riv.vu." and giving the number of the White House switchboard. Negotiations took five weeks, with the deal finally being consummated and approved by the Board of Trustees last week.

Renovations to the White House to make it into student housing will require the conversion of the Mansion's hundreds of rooms into doubles and triples, the installation of faulty into a dorm, which will be called Monty Hall, according to Charles "Let's Make A" Diehl.

elevators, and the importation of thousands of cockroaches. In addition, the palatial White House kitchen and dining room will be taken over by Tacke Food Services, and the Oval Office will be made into a vending machine area. The famed White House "Hotline" to Moscow will be put on the University's Centrex telephone system.

Diehl also stated that the lawns and gardens around the house will be bulldozed and made over into Colonial parking lots. He added that while the fence surrounding the property will be torn down, the guard shacks will remain standing because, according to Diehl, "they'll be perfect for parking lot control booths."

Seven Succumb

Tacke Serves Meat

Tragedy struck the Tacke dining area in Thurston Hall yesterday when seven students succumbed after eating hamburgers which had apparently been laced with real meat.

"It was an unavoidable error," said Craig Slob, Thurston Tacke manager. "That's the way we received the hamburgers. There was no way we could have known."

Diners surrounding the seven killed said that each had just taken a big bite of a "Tackeburger," when they yelled "My God, real meat," and fell over in a state of shock.

The seven were dead on arrival at GW Hospital, where doctors listed the cause of death as cardiac arrest following a sudden, extreme shock.

Sources within Tacke theorized that meat may have crept into the hamburgers, which are normally made of soy, if a stray cow had wandered too near the processing plant for the patties and been ground up along with the soy. The entire batch of Tackeburgers has been recalled by the federal Food and Drug Administration for testing.

University president Lloyd Elliott declared a five second moment of mourning for the stricken students today, saying in his declaration, "It's terrible and everything, but we've got to get back to making money, and educating people, too."

Kennedy Won't Run; Race Now Wide Open

Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass) told a Tomahawk reporter Tuesday that he would "under no circumstances" accept the presidency of the GW student government.

Kennedy, third of the famous line of Kennedy brothers, told the Tomahawk, "The wishes of my family have to come first. Besides, the job doesn't pay a hell of a lot, anyway."

(see KENNEDY, p. 2)

That little gismo on the right is GW Security's latest protection device. Guards are now manning the objects, which are placed in strategic points on campus sidewalks, 24 hours a day.

Bored Books Beatles

The Program Bored has made plans for a major concert in Lisner Auditorium next Saturday night featuring the Beatles.

Although the Fab Four have been broken up for several years, Program Bored Chairman Ice Cream Cone said, "According to what we've been told, they've agreed to play Lisner Saturday night as the first stop on their comeback concert tour." The band was booked at a cost of $50,000, according to Cone.

He continued, "We plan to charge five dollars a ticket, and with 2,000 seats at Lisner, we figure we'll lose only about $40,000." Cone said this deficit size was "about average" for a Program Bored production of this type.

Teddy Out Of Race

Kennedy's candidacy had been the source of much rumor since the leading candidate in the early going, campus politician and lack of personality Mark Shifty, was unable to answer charges of asininity.

Sources also said that Shifty's mind may also have been swayed by a beating he received from the entire student body, the whole faculty, the administration and a couple of passing bums behind Thurston Hall two weeks ago. Shifty

According to Cone, the Beatles "just decided to come together and start their tour here. Something about GW and the Bicentennial, and all that."

Cone told the Tomahawk that the opportunity to sponsor the concert "just came out of the blue." He said that the Bored had recieved a call last week from Beatle manager Brian Epstein offering the concert to the GW Program Bored, and "we just snapped it up. Wouldn't anyone?"

Cone declined comment, however, when it was pointed out to him that Epstein has been dead for nine years.

was taken to GW hospital following the beating, where his condition is described as "pitiful."

Shifty's statement of withdrawal, made from his hospital bed through seventeen layers of bandages, consisted of the two words, "I quit," though not necessarily in that order.

The withdrawal of Shifty and Kennedy leaves the race wide open at present, with prominent potential candidates keeping as much distance as possible from the situation.

Smith Center Collapses

GW's athletic program took a sizable step backwards Friday when the brand new Smith Center for Athletics collapsed in a pile of rubble.

Officials blamed the collapse of the building on the meeting of two cracks which have the basketball floor, and dem walls came tumblin' down."

Fooled said the athletic department was making plans to move elsewhere, and that several possible alternatives are presently being examined.

One alternative, which Fooled said had an "inside track," is the reconstruction of the Tin Tabernacle. The GW landmark was torn down over the winter upon completion of the Smith Center, and its bricks were sold, one by one, to alumni and friends of the University for ten dollars apiece. "We can get them back for about fifteen, twenty dollars each," Fooled said, adding that calls were currently being made to all holders of the bricks in an attempt to buy them all back so the Tabernacle can be reconstructed.

Who Cares?

There can no longer be any doubt that apathy at GW is a large problem. The fire which consumed Mitchell Hall last week is a prime example. The building is now just a pile of ashes, but several hundred residents of the dormitory say it doesn't bother them, and continue to live in the debris.

Another example is the lack of student response to the GW plan to buy the White House and turn it into a dorm. Any student body worth sneezing at would have spoken right up and asked the administration why they bought the White House, built hundreds of years ago and decrepit, rather than the Washington Hilton, which is only a few years old and has a lot more rooms.

Why is this the case at GW? Why is the GW community so lackdassical and uncaring? The fact that only seven students turned up this winter to watch the biggest basketball game of the season, notwithstanding the fact that it was a record attendance figure, further points up the problem. Is GW that unexciting? Is the University that boring?

Furthermore...zzzzzzzzz ////////////////

Headline Gets U.S. Player

GW soccer coach Grab Headline announced last week the signing of a new soccer recruit to a grant-in-aid. But Headline expects one problem: the new recruit speaks only English.

This is a problem on the GW soccer team, which is made up entirely of foreign students, and Headline said the new player, whose name is John Smith, could have some problems communicating with the team.

Headline was asked if he personally would have any problems speaking with his new recruit, but hand-signalling between Headline and the Tomahawk reporter interviewing him broke down, and his answer, as far as we can make out was, "No, I don't think ham and cheese on rye banana giraffe."

Sports

plagued the structure since its completion.

Sports Misinformation Director Doug Fooled, who was hit on the head by a 20-ton chunk of concrete during the collapse but escaped with only an injury to his leg, told a hastily assembled press conference that the crack in the swimming pool and the crack in one of the squash courts "met in the middle of

Once again, under the coaching of Georges Ederline, the GW soccer team fared well. Top scorer, Derya Yavalar, contributed to the Buff's successful season and continued to add to his and GW's alltime scoring record.

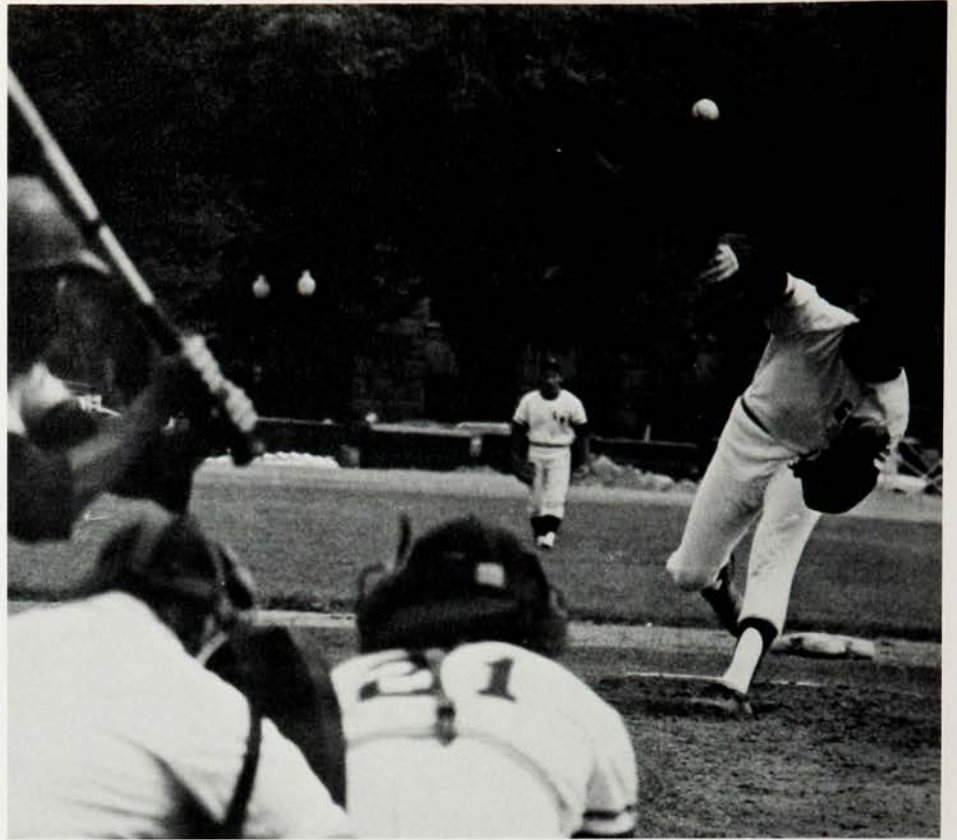

Soccer at GW has become a major sport — and a winning one. Hopefully, this will continue in the future and more and more students will follow the team and share in the victories.

BASEBALL

If you happen to walk by the back lawn of the White House, you may catch the GW baseball team playing across the street in the ellipse.

Although the fall of 1975 was not their best season, the team looks forward to improving in the spring. With second baseman Joel Oleinik batting .353 and 6 players batting over .200 the future should be brighter.

There are so many factors that make up the game: wind direction, temperature, ground surface, racket, opponent, and the many psychological factors that sometimes mean the difference between winning and losing.

Although 1975 was not their best year and they will sadly watch the departure of their number one ranked singles player, Svea Paabo; they have much to look forward to in the future. Sally Henry and Cathy Potkay are going to be hard opponents to play against in future matches. If all goes well, 1976 could be the year for women's tennis at George Washington.

CREW

Perfect timing, accuracy, dedication, hard work, and team effort are the key ingredients to a successful crew team.

For years the team has gathered at Thompson's boathouse in the early hours of the morning. Their paddles slice into the Potomac at a constant pace — a continuous rhythm of sweat and effort. From a distance they're like a fine tuned machine — graceful and powerful, quiet and efficient. Crew is the ultimate in team work.

CANDIDS

While others climb reaching dizzy heights,
The world's in front of me in black and white.

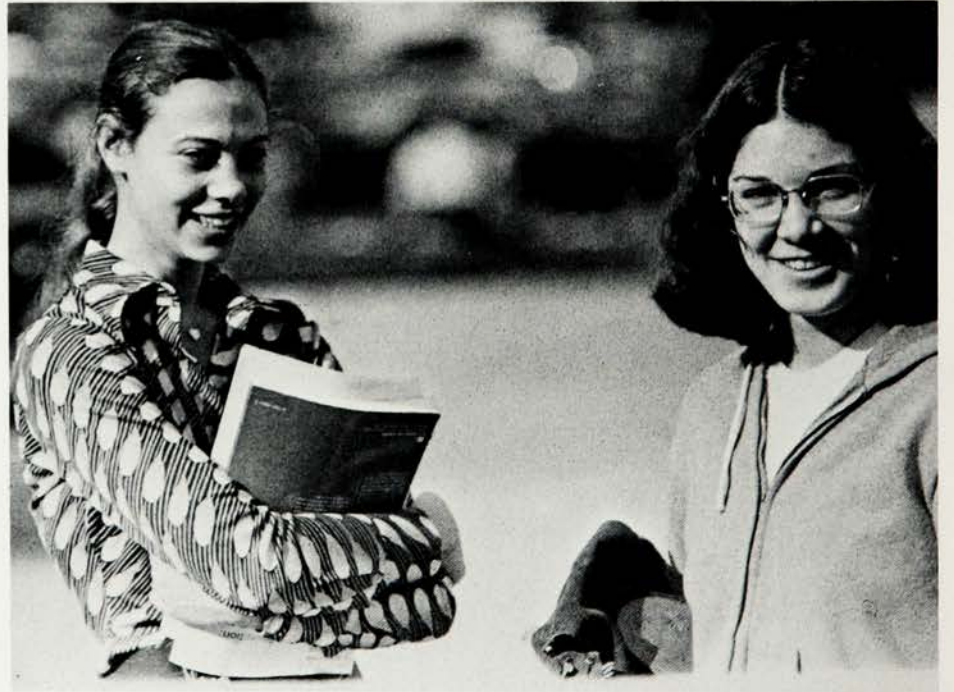

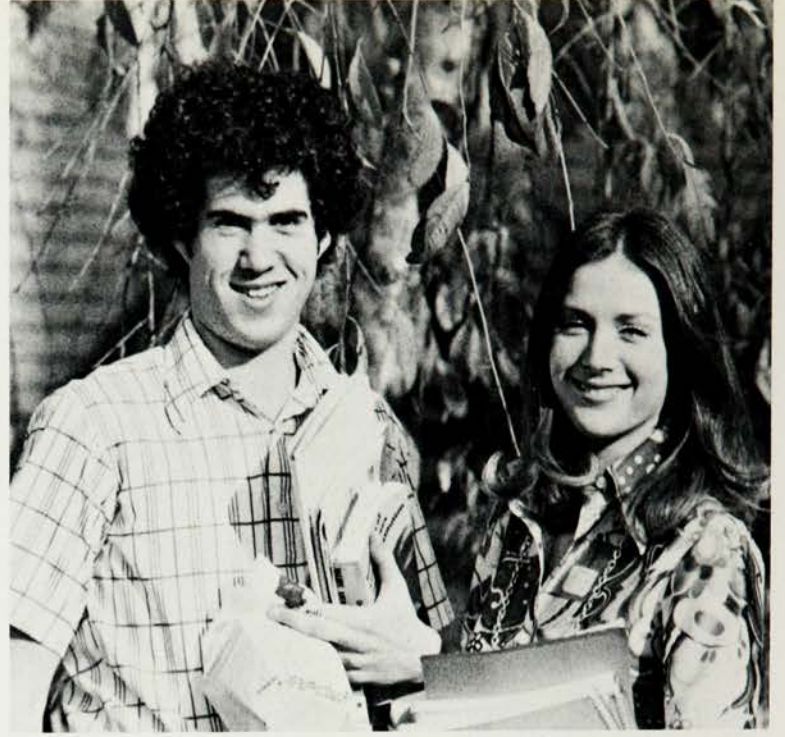

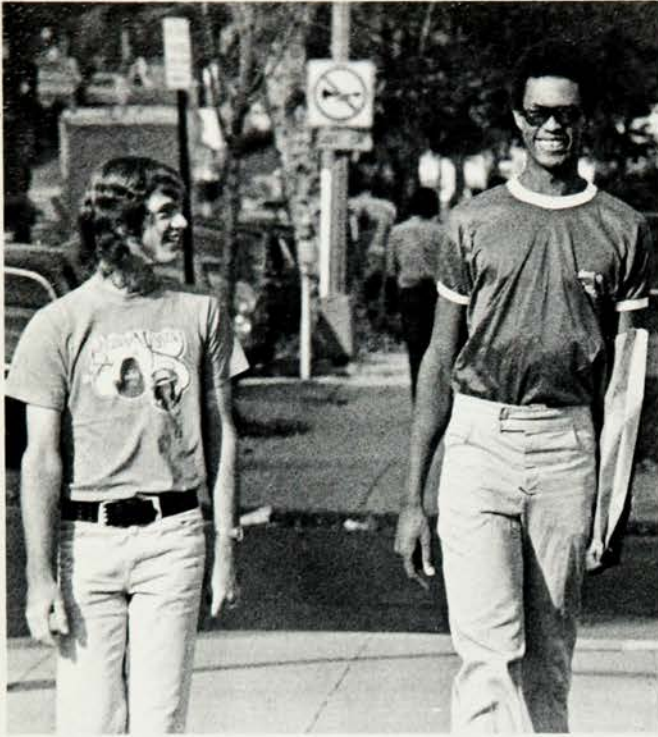

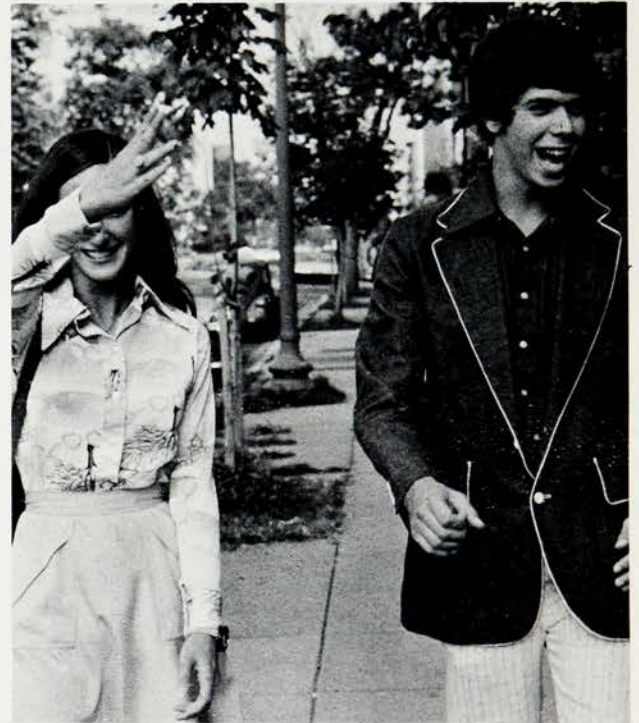

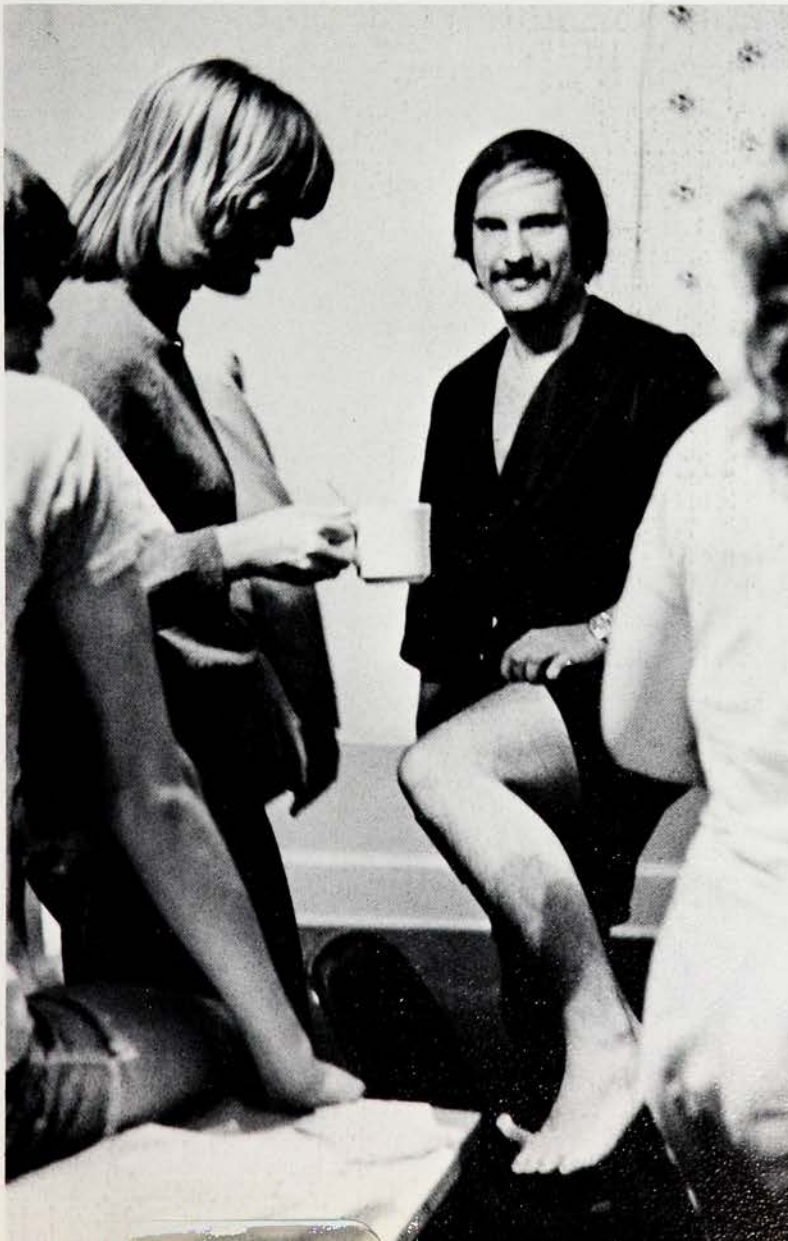

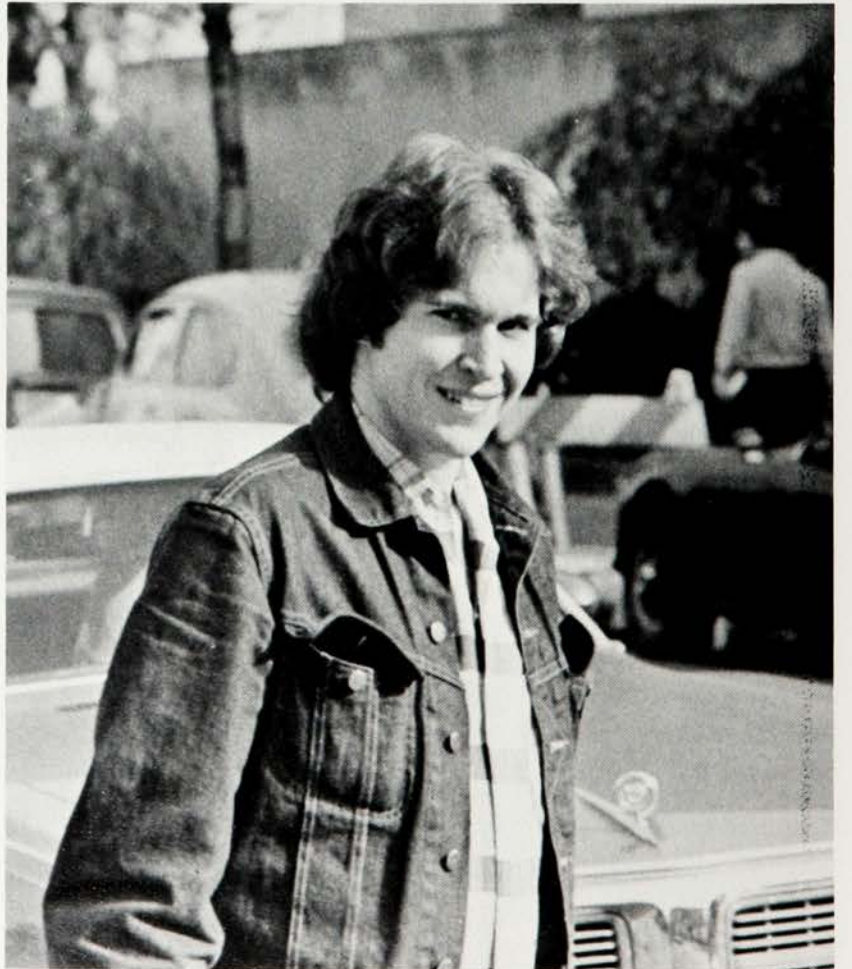

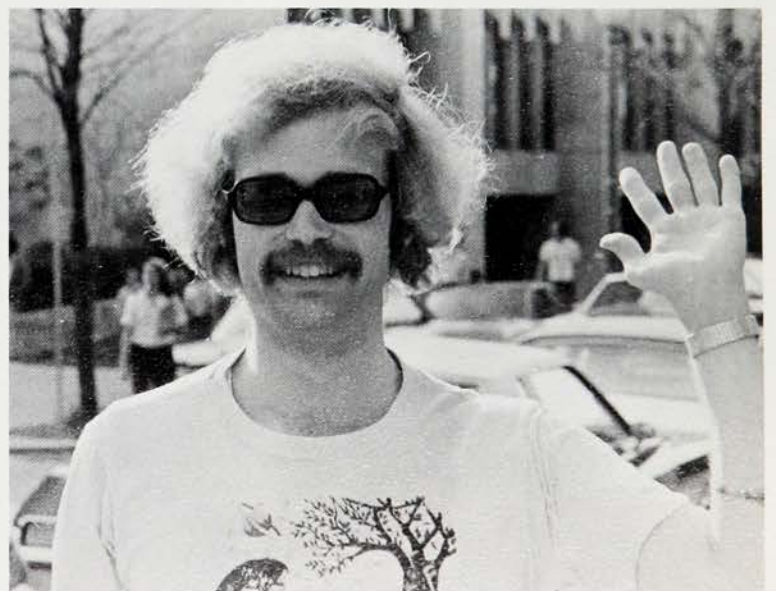

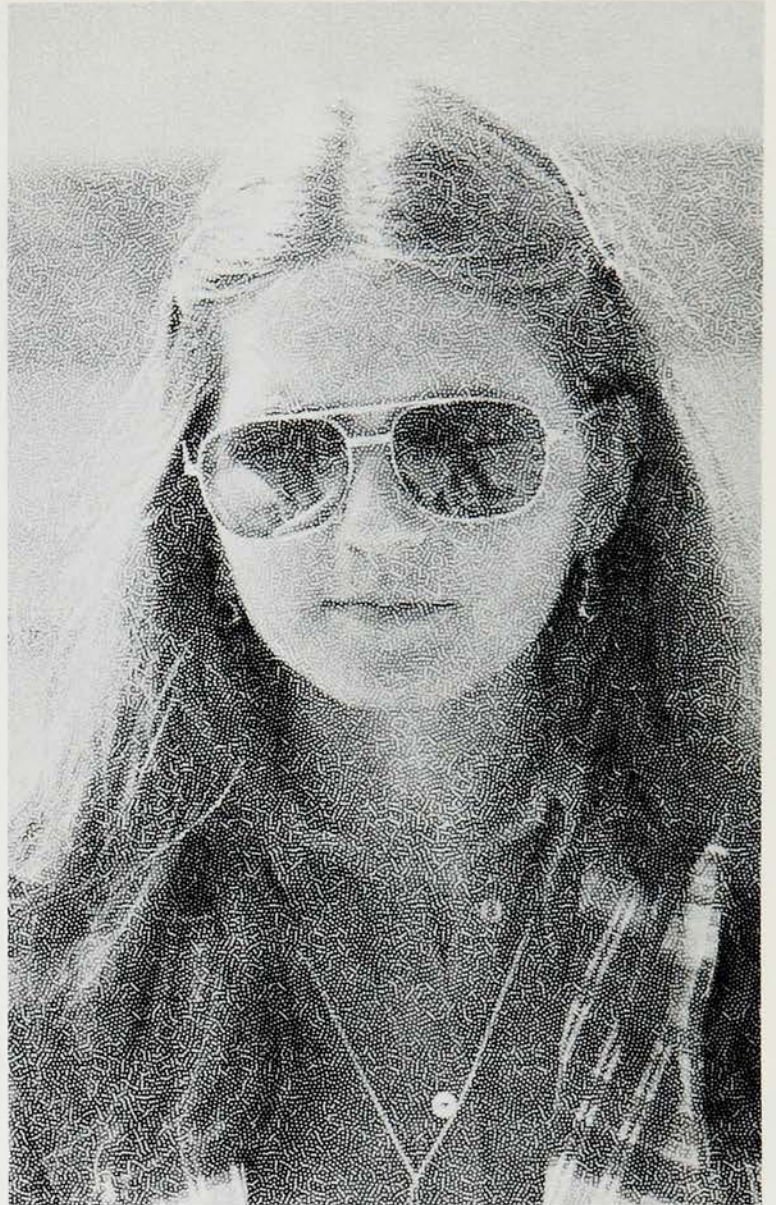

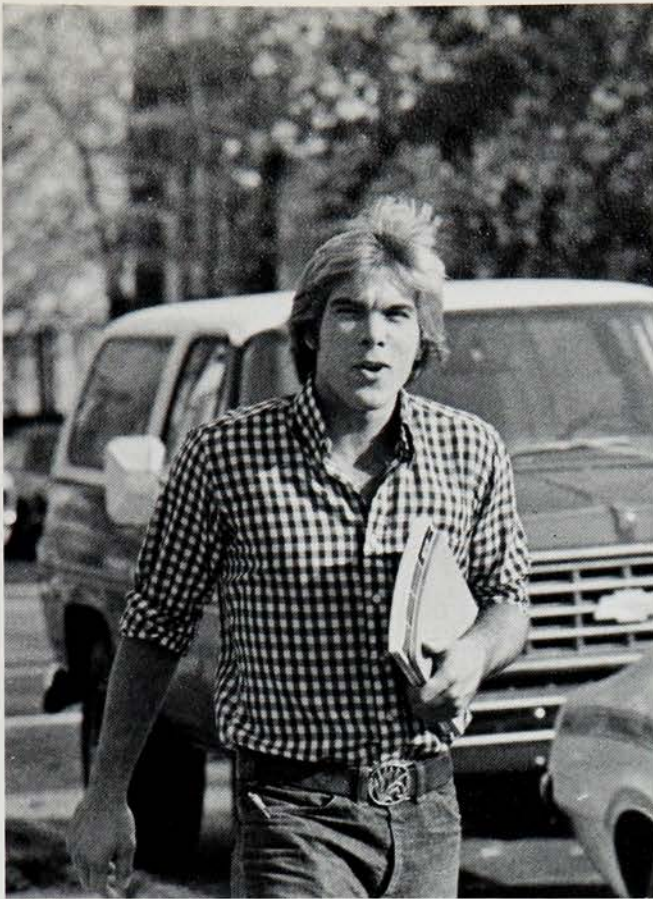

I know you and you know me
It's always half and half.

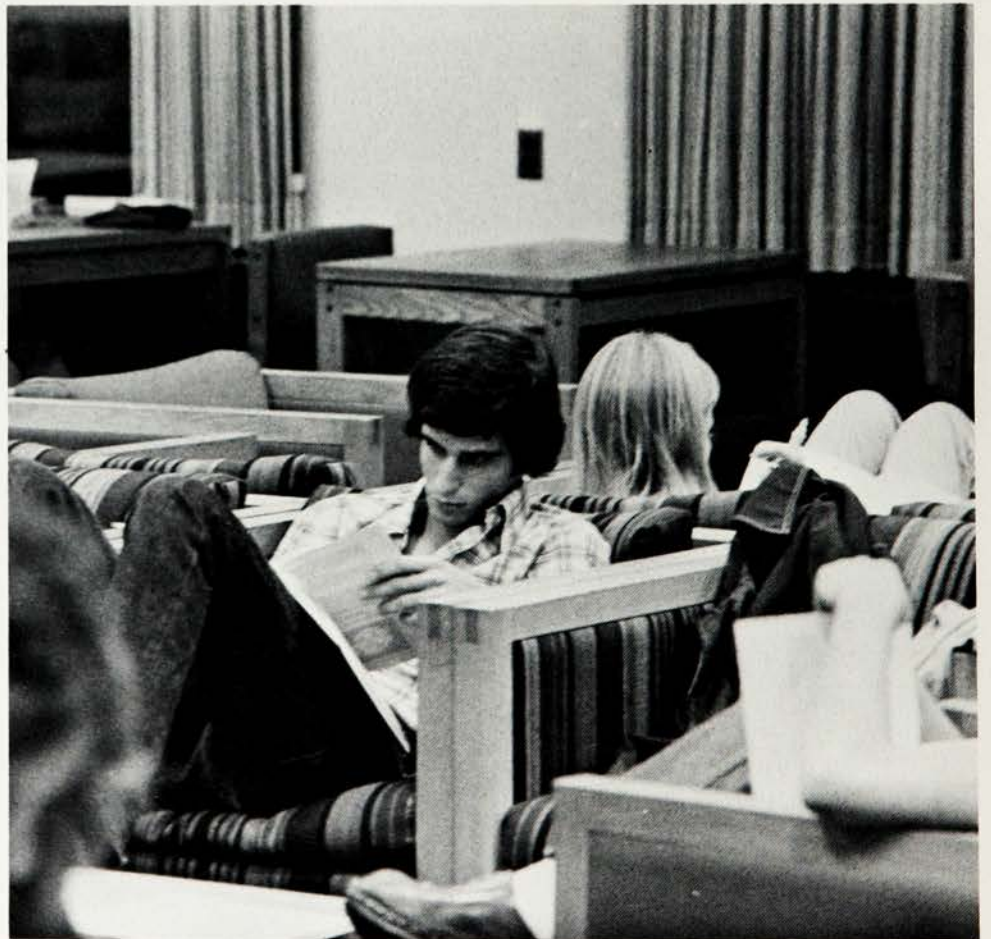

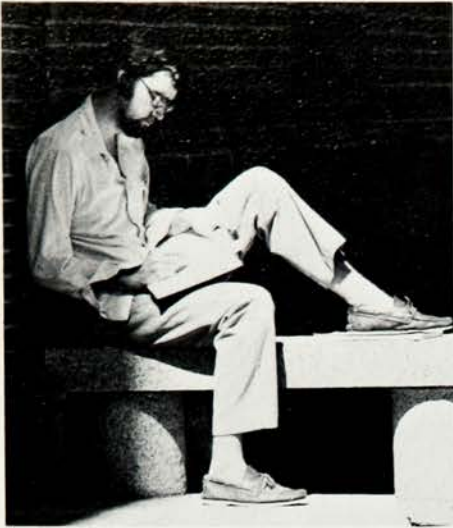

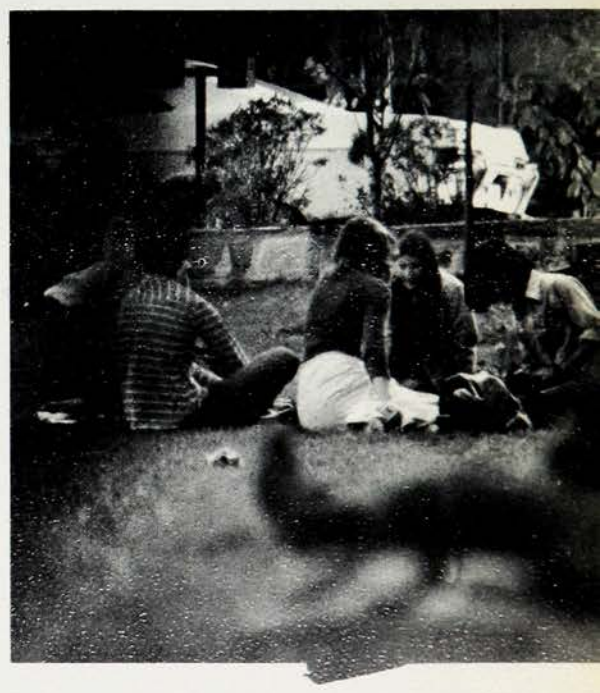

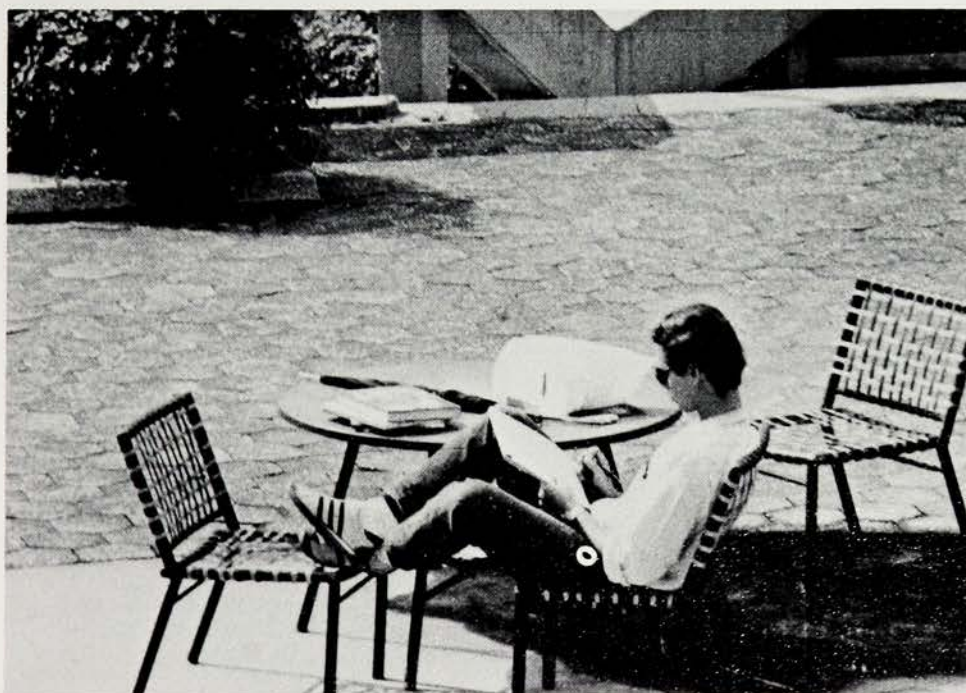

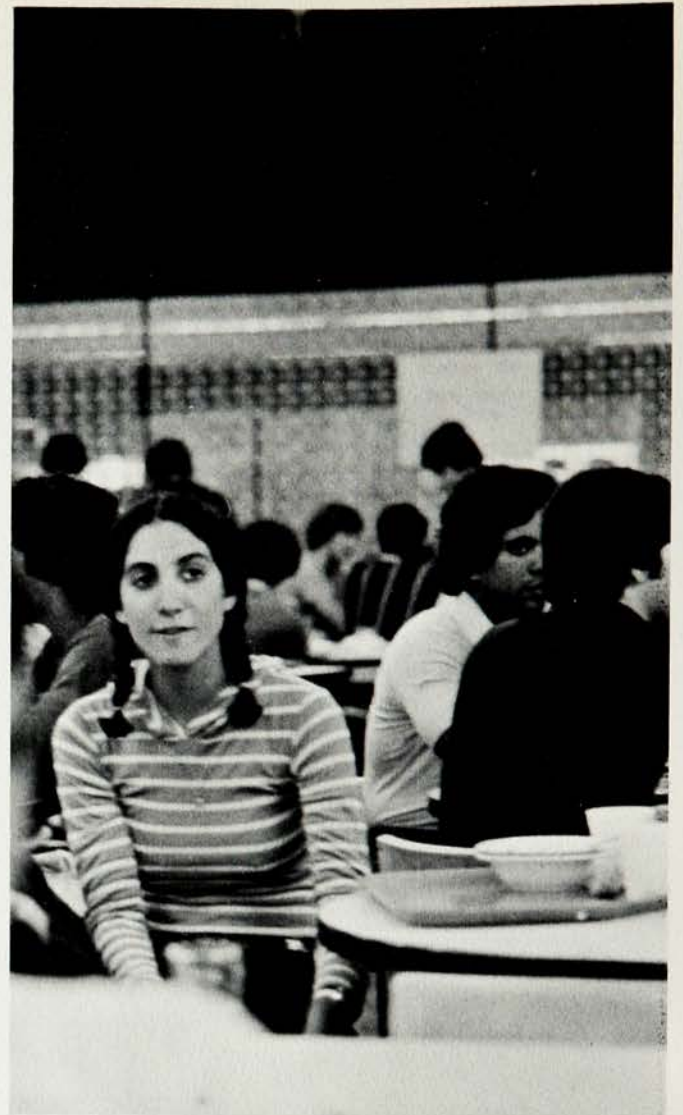

For there's weak winged young sparrows
 That starve in the winter,
 Broken young children
 On the wheels of the winners.
 And the sixty-eight summer festival wallflowers
 Are thinning.

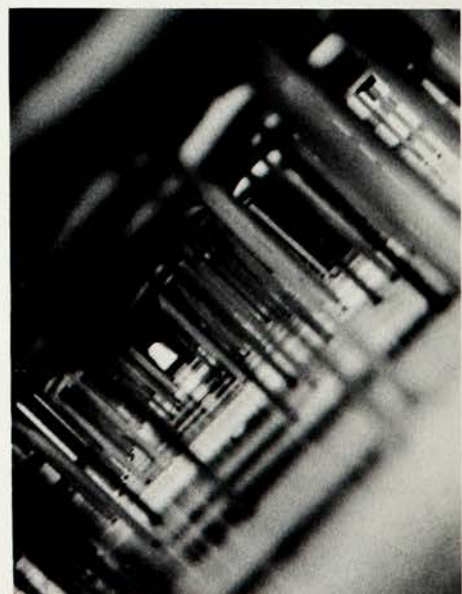

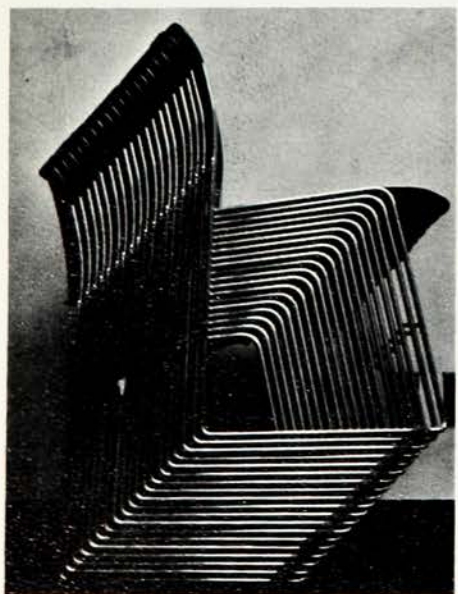

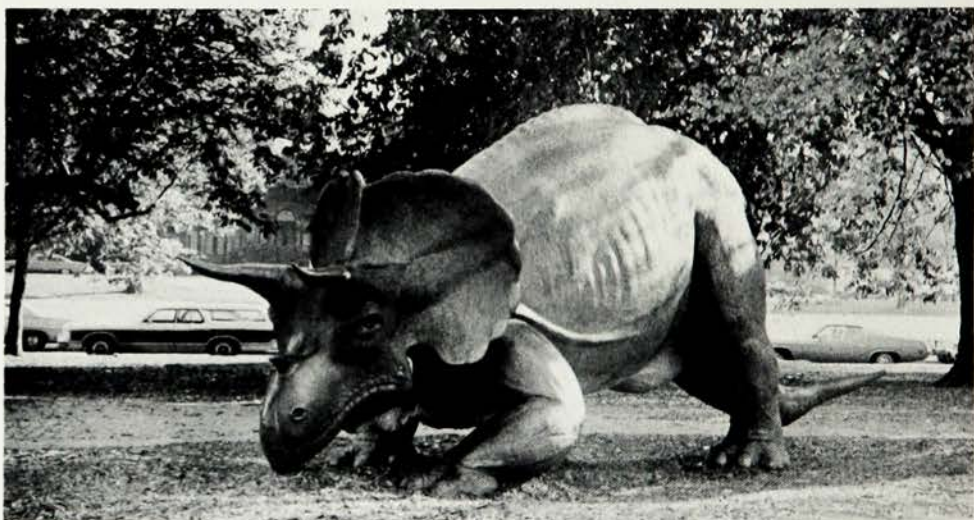

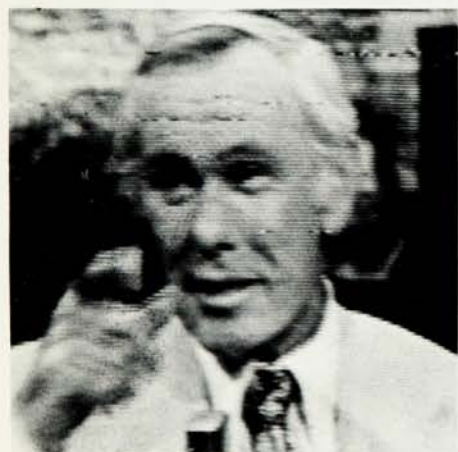

As the flickering neon stands ready to fuse
The wind blows away all of yesterday's news.

HALLOWEEN DANCE

If you ask how I am then I'll just say inspired.

And all this talk of Jesus
Coming back to see us
Couldn't fool us.
For we were spinning out our lines
Walking on the wire,
Hand in hand went music and the rhyme.
The Captain and the Kid
Stepping in the ring,
From here on sonny
It's a long and lonely climb.

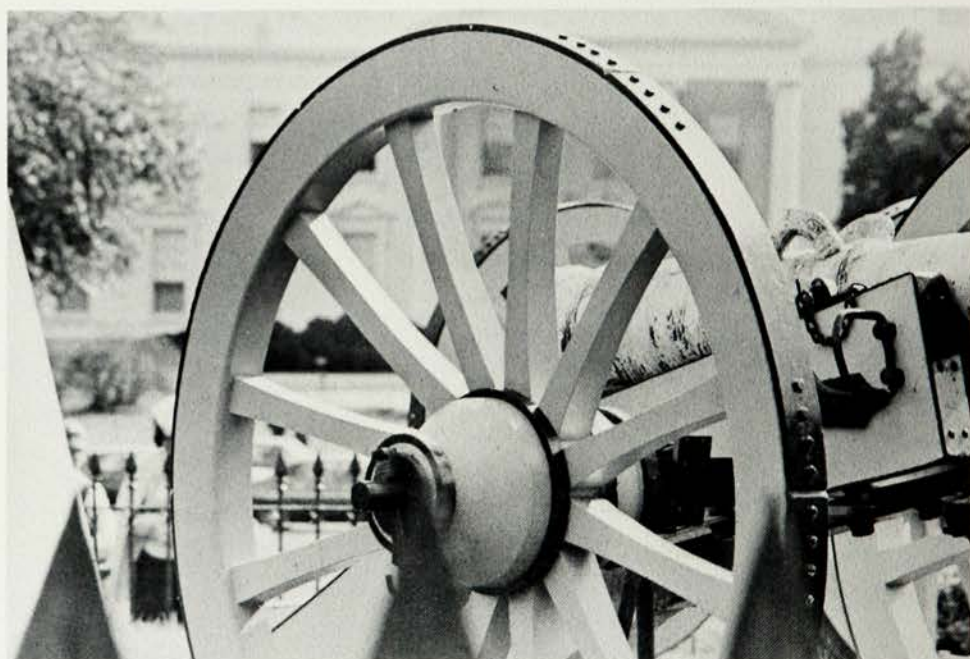

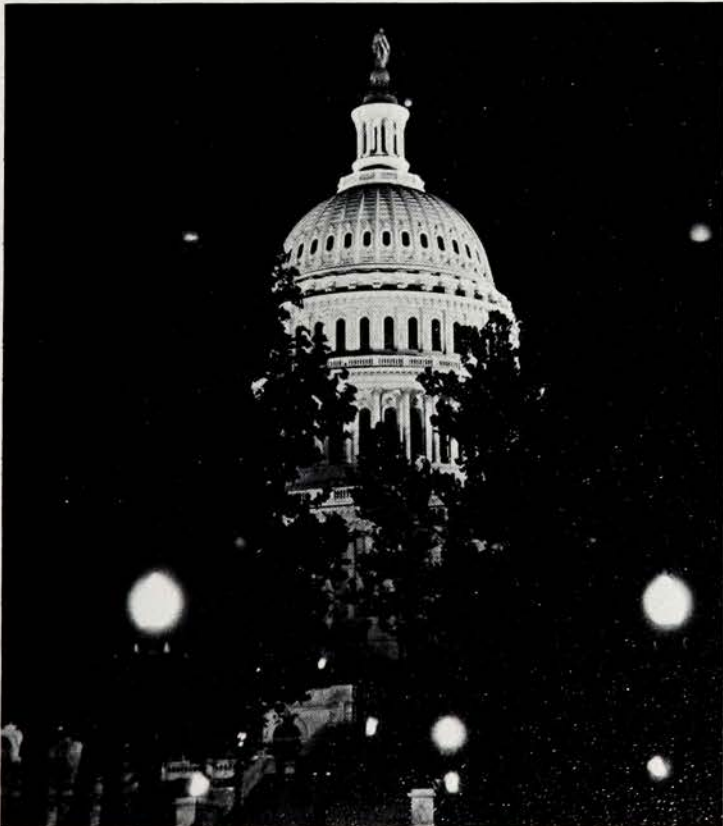

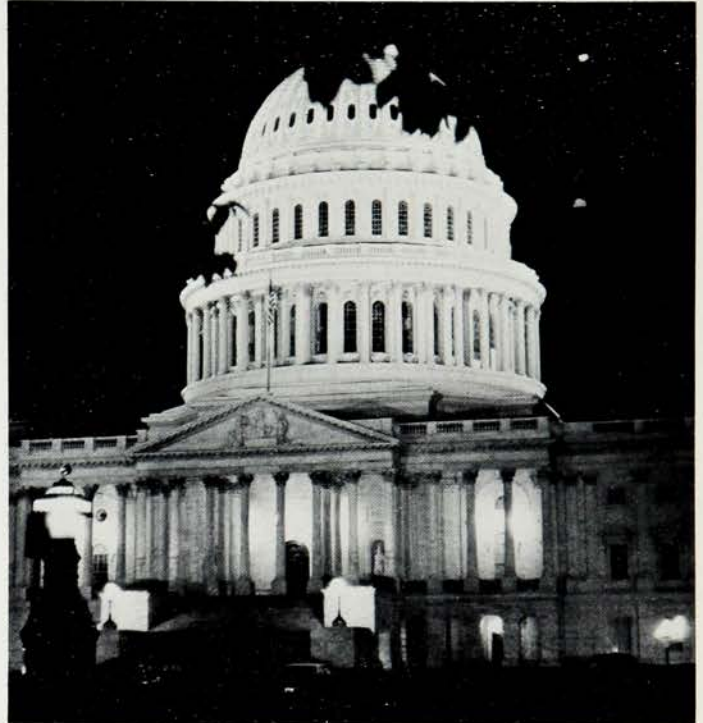

All lyrics in the section
by Bernie Taupin, as sung by Elton John.

The city of Washington is a very significant aspect of every GW student's education. Not only do we see it from a historical perspective, but we also learn to use it to broaden our education

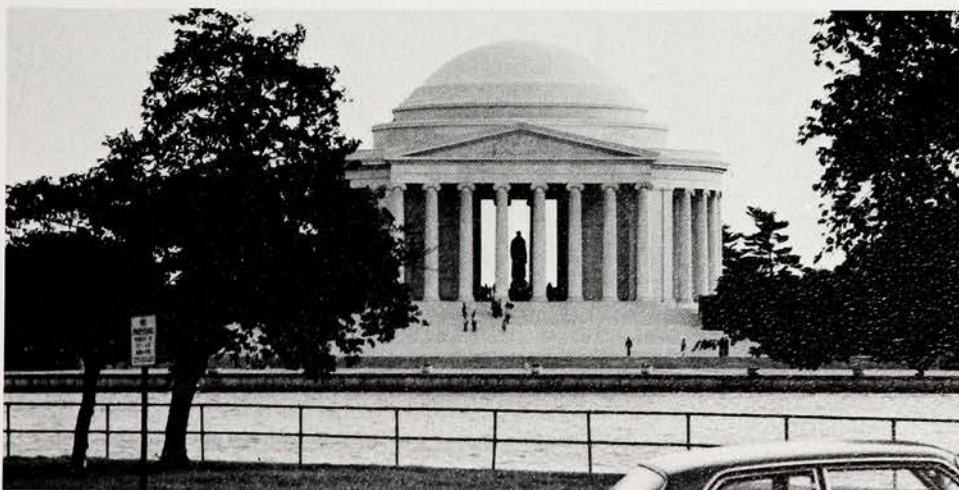

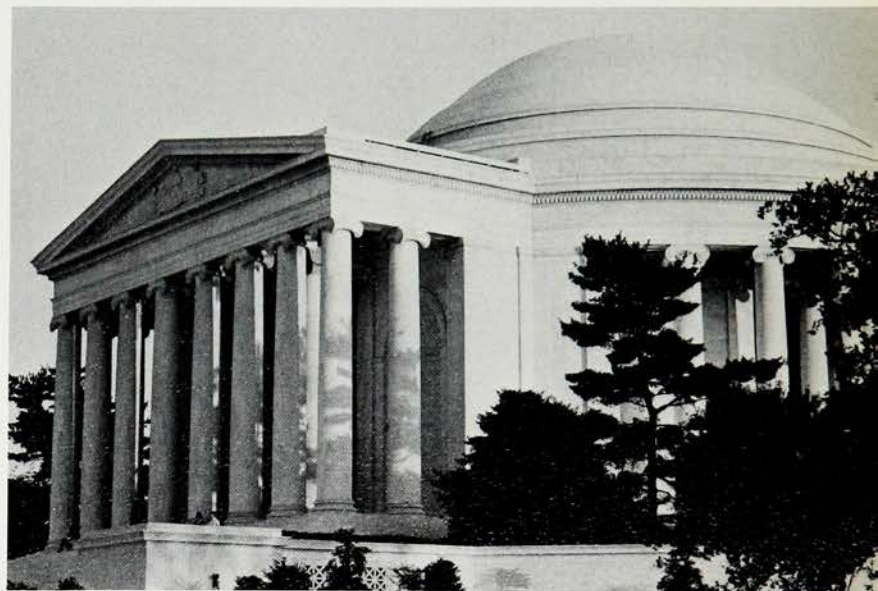

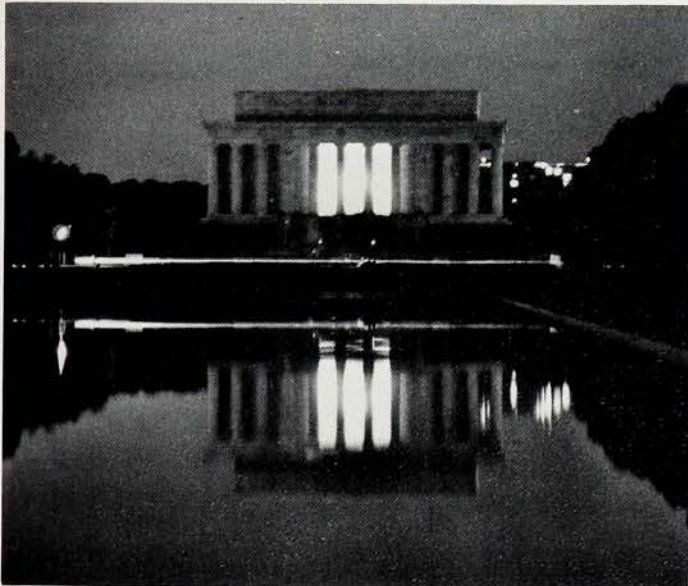

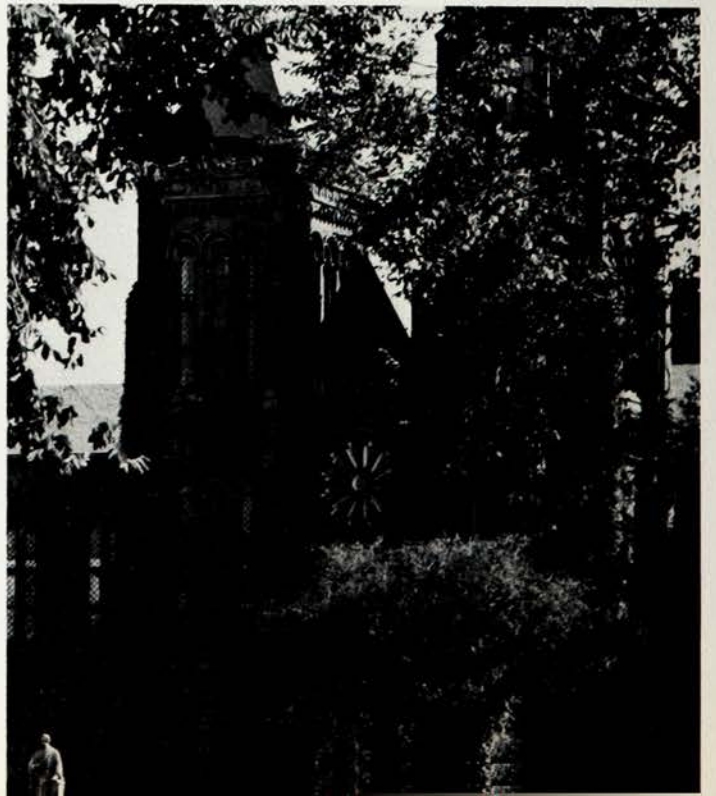

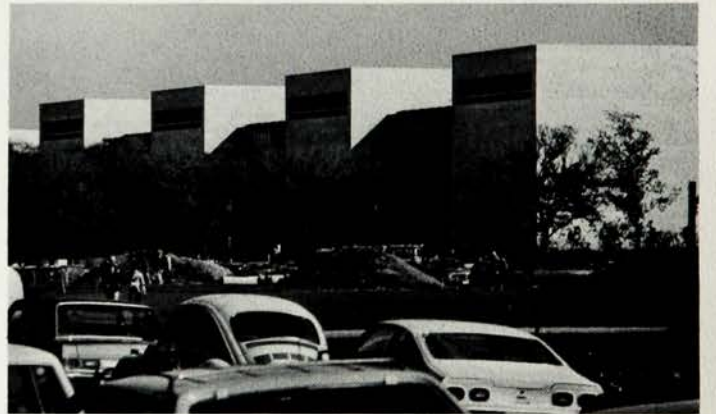

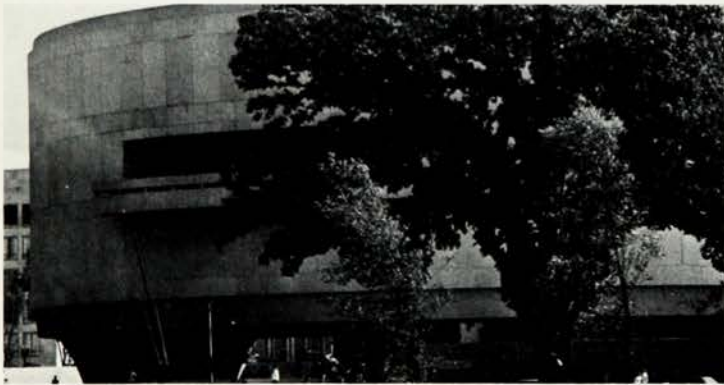

At first sight, Washington is all monuments and historical stone landmarks. After one has been here for some time, however, the city takes on a different light. At night Washington can be awesome, inspiring and eloquent. Students will tell you there is no better place to be, than in Washington during the spring.

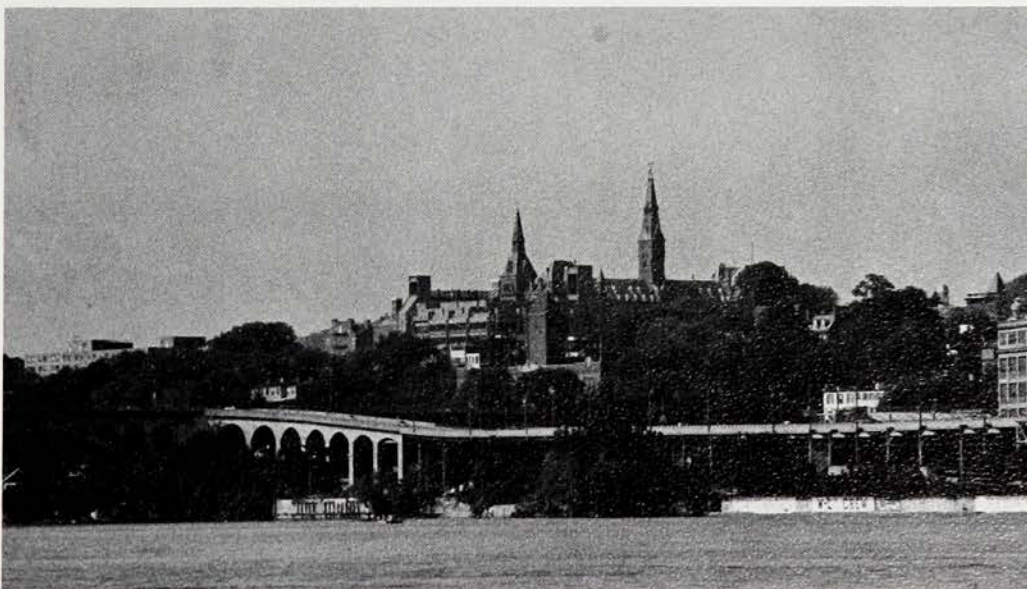

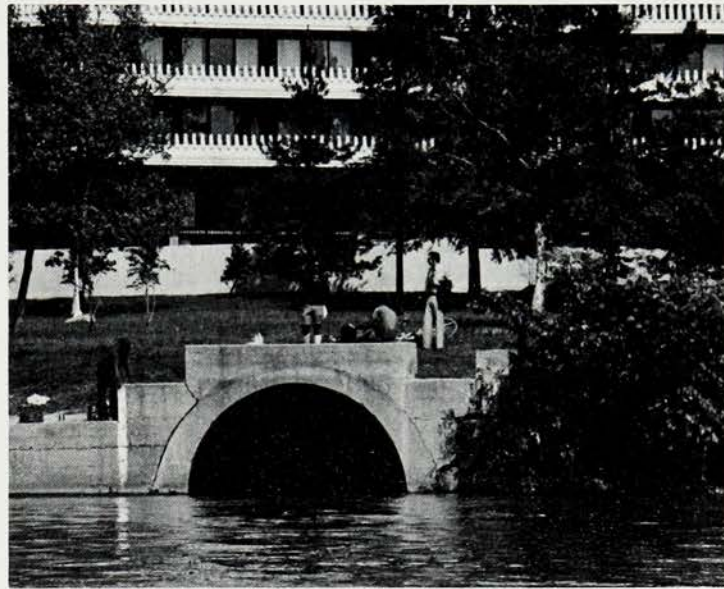

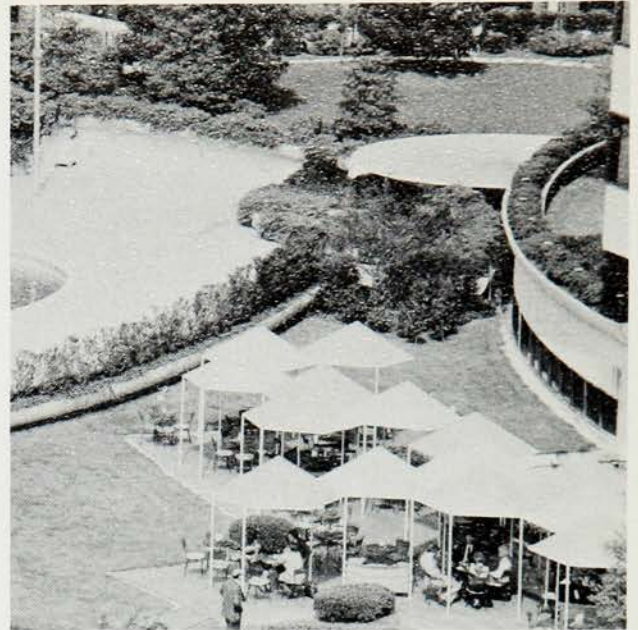

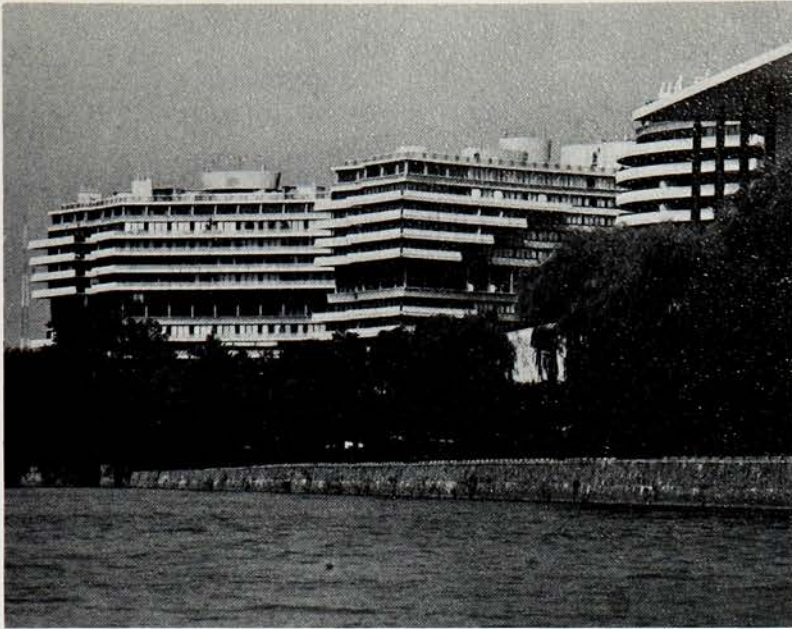

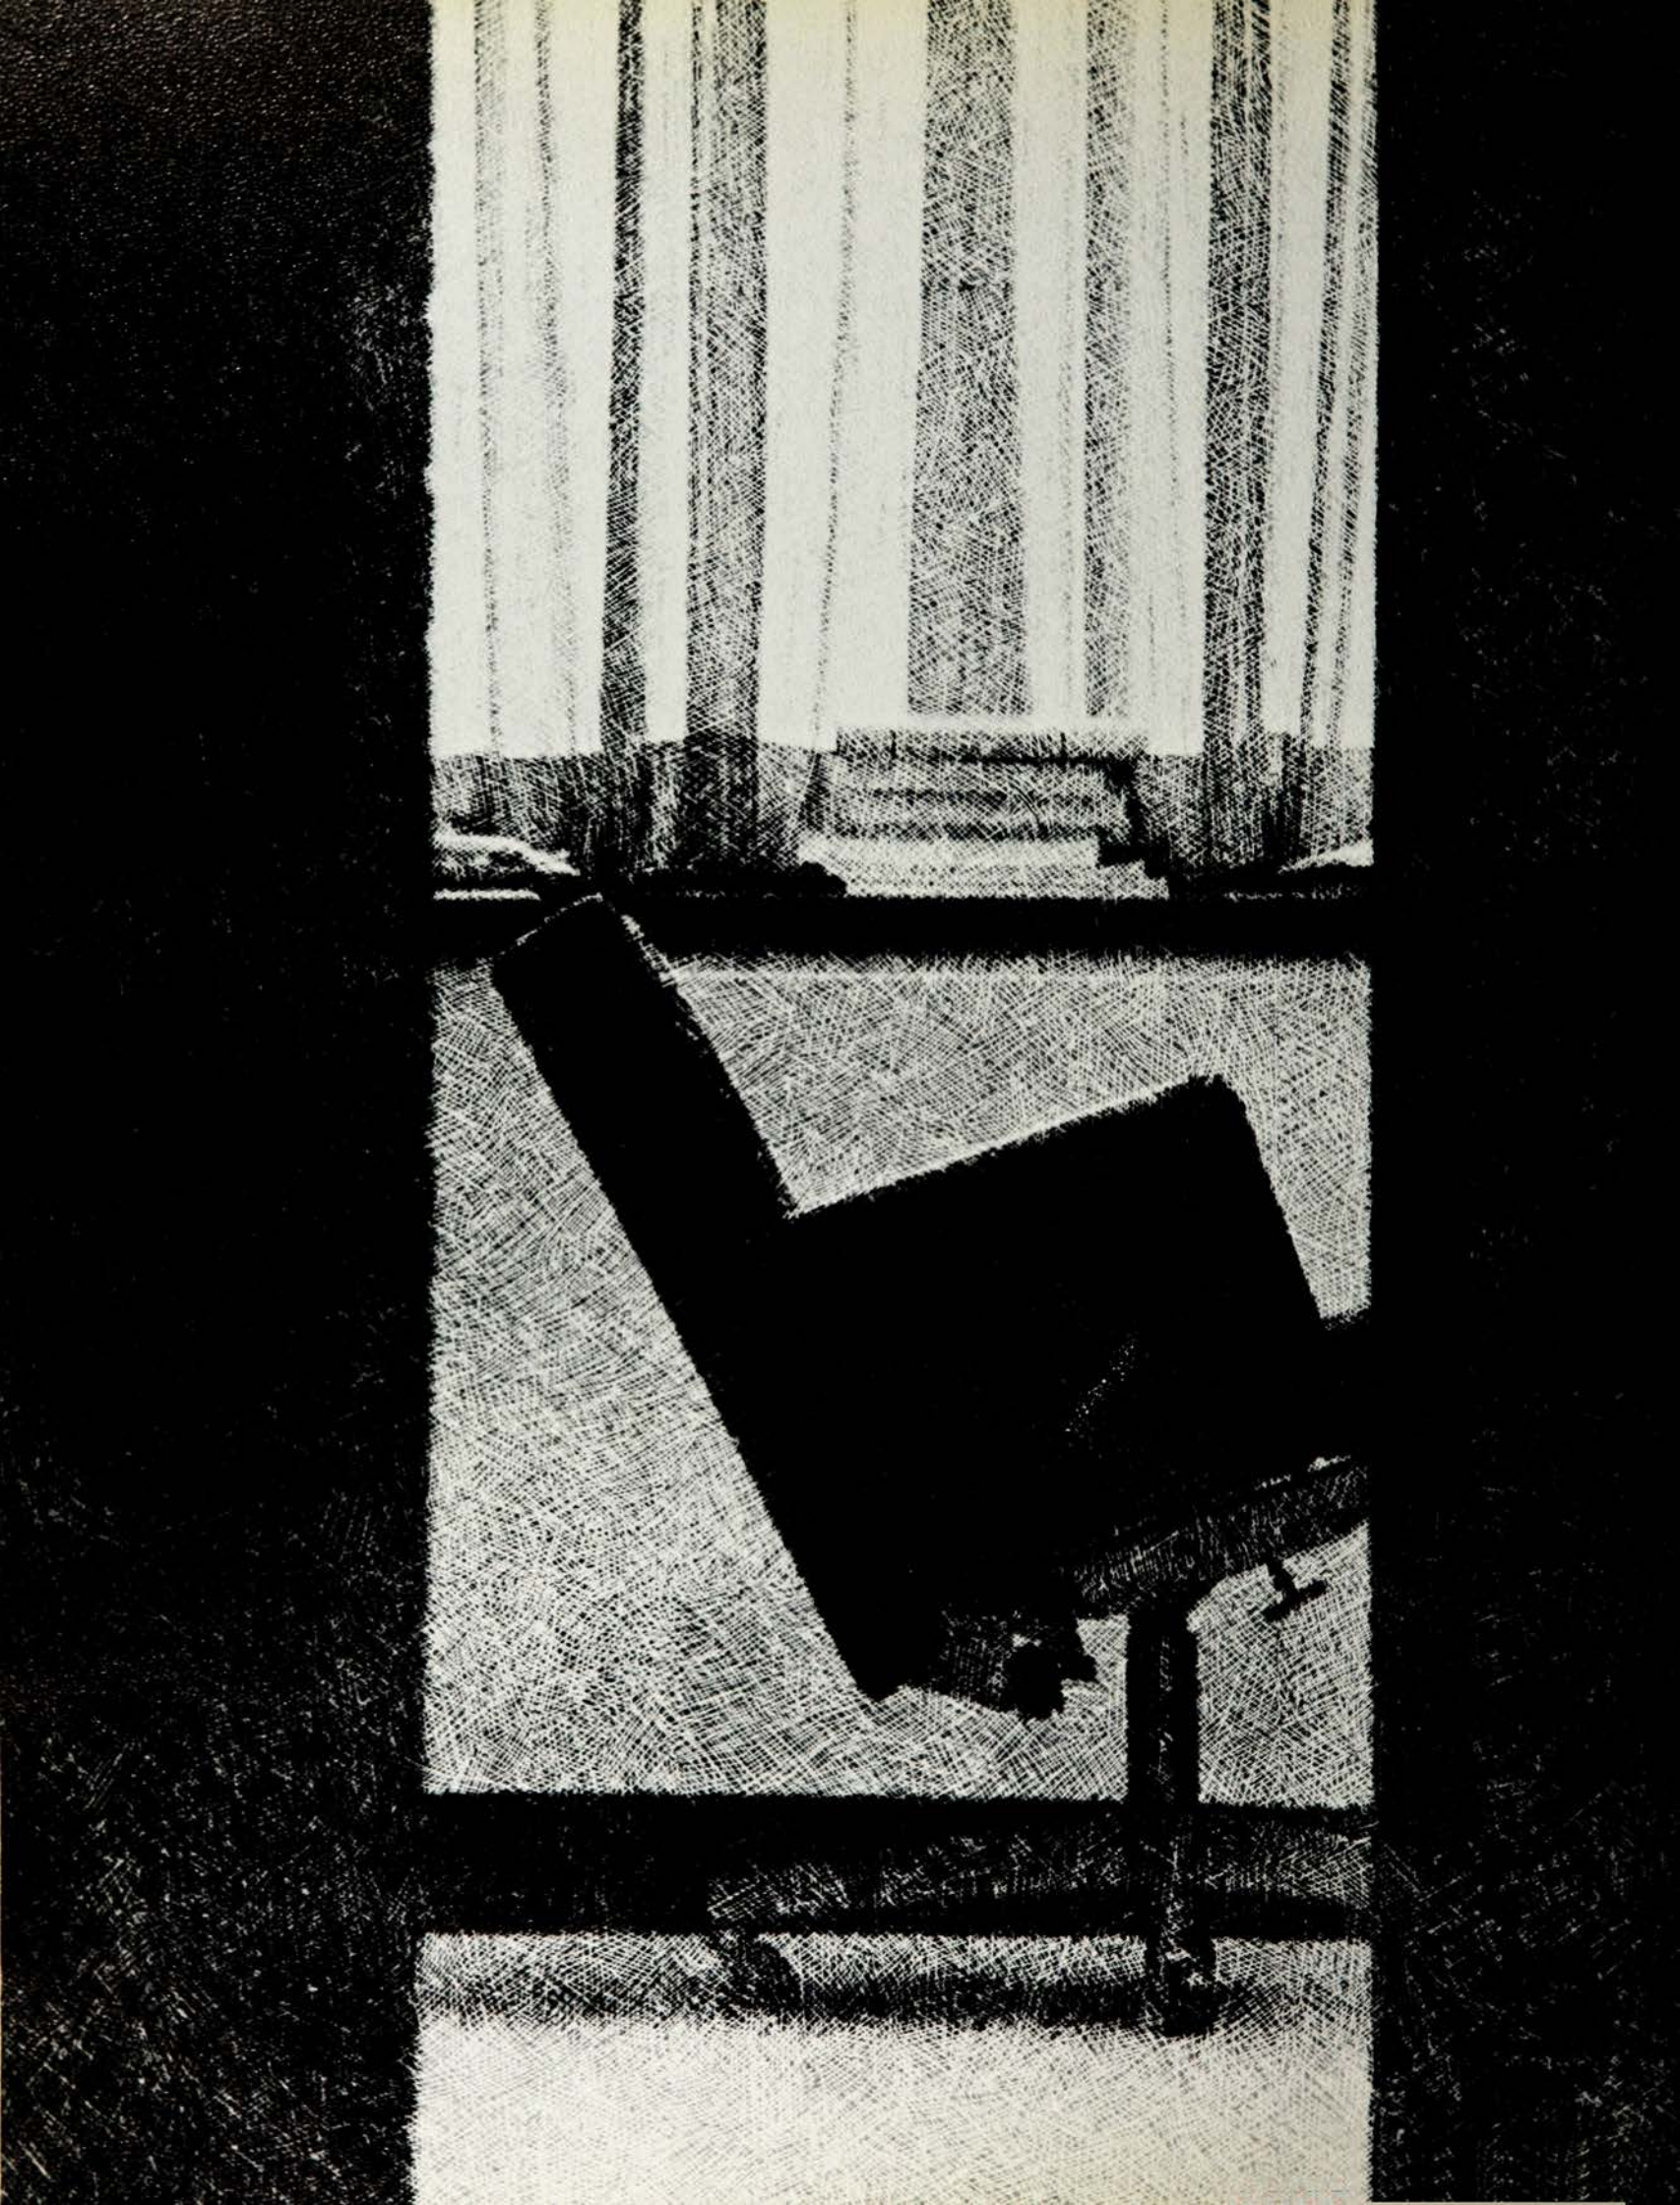

This is our center of the city. Every student has seen these views. Not to become a part, to remain uninvolved, to be an outsider — is impossible. The city and all it has to offer: culturally, socially, politically and historically is an extension of the University; as much a part as the textbook, the classroom, and the education.

Instructor in Speech

The university, of course, offers not only the opportunity for intellectual growth, but for cultural and social growth as well. The traditional problems of misguided priorities and apathetic human natures always exist, and no matter what is done it seems they always will.

The important thing, then, is that the university remains a focal point for those who do wish diverse and pervasive involvement on all levels of campus life — and a potential realm of such involvement for the many who seem to emerge during this fantastic period of life.

DAVID SKOLNICK

Vincent P. Parady
Instructor in Drama

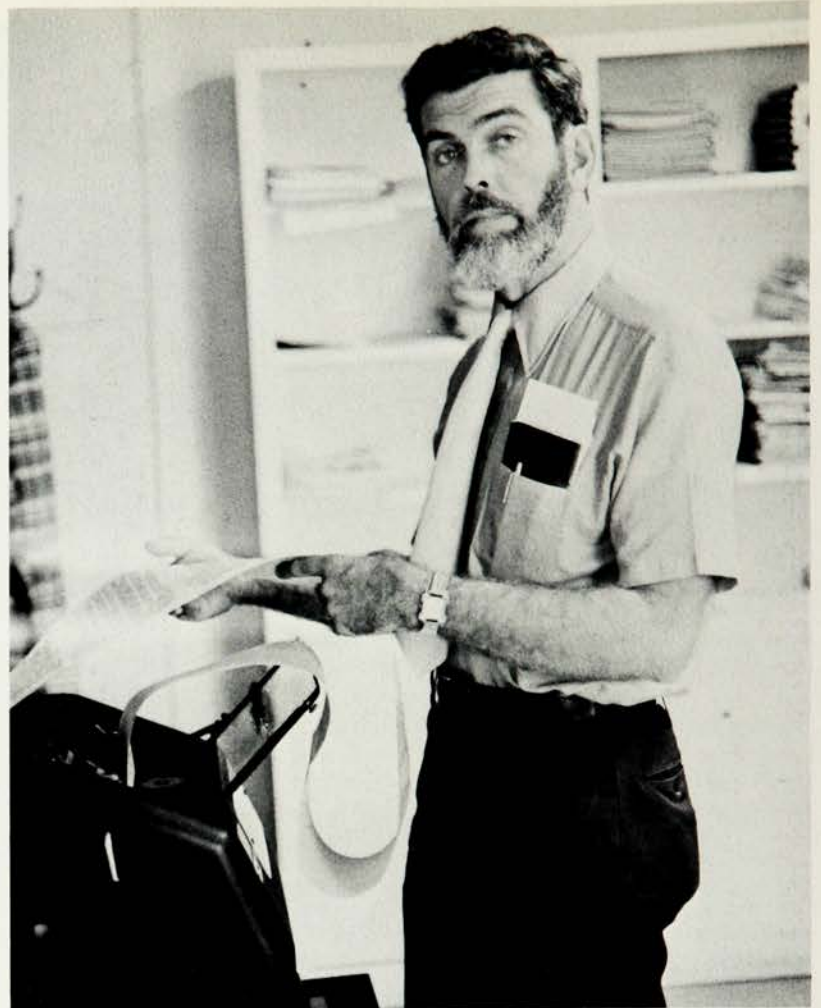

Edwin L. Stevens
Professor of Speech

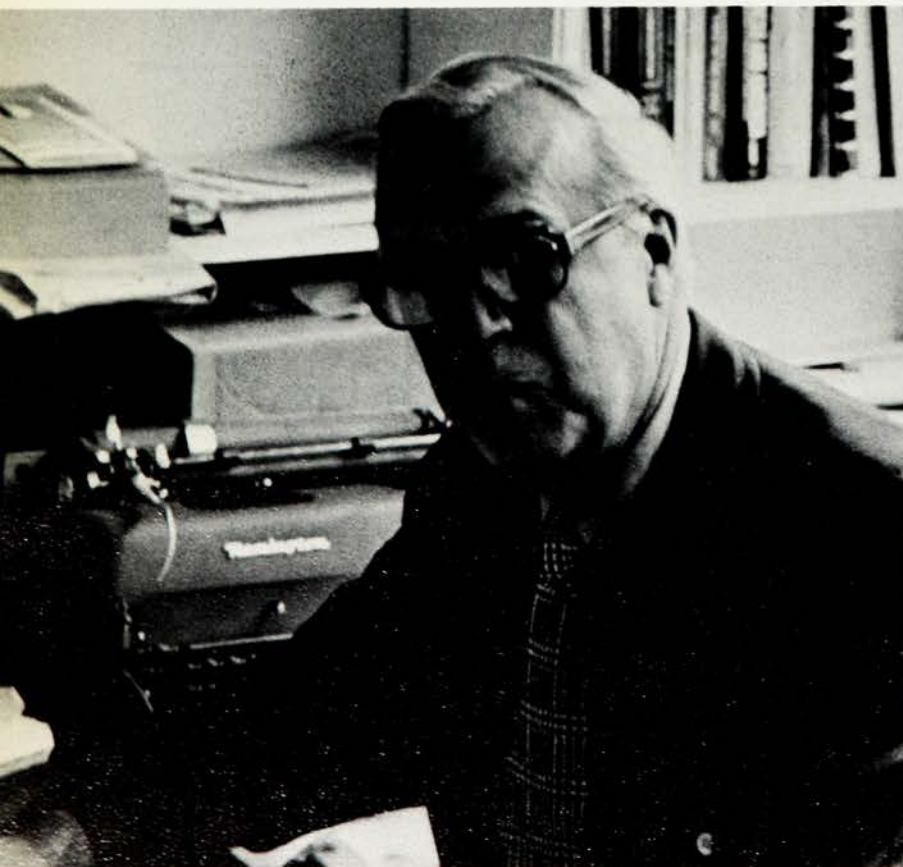

"My style is perhaps more personal than some other teachers. I tend to have involvement with my students. I always have occasion to talk with them, and not necessarily only about class activities as such."

CONGRATULATIONS SENIORS

It was four tough years but you made it!

Best of luck in the future and remember that once things are over they are never as bad as they seemed at the time.

THE PROGRAM BOARD

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

November 4, 1975

Dear Mr. Hart:

Thank you for your letter to President Ford. While it will not be possible for him to accept your kind offer, you may be sure your thoughtful interest is appreciated.

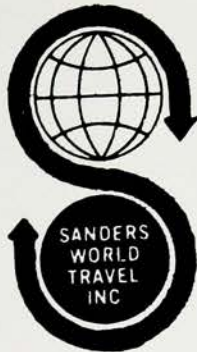

The President sends his best wishes to you.

Sincerely,

Second, find the picture's page number on this page and move across to the column representing your picture number. Use the single letter code given to determine which photographer took the picture.

THE 1976 CHERRY TREE STAFF

Congratulations are in order for many people who worked on this year's book. In fact, I am indebted to more people than space will allow, but I must mention a few:

— Robert Hart. On loan from Al's, Bob was a key ingredient to our success this year. He was able to bring in more advertisers and more seniors for senior pictures than I ever dreamed possible. Bob is a true businessman's businessman.

— Rich Stalford. Despite a busy schedule, Rich delivered more than anyone on the staff. He went out of his way and took some of those pictures that many others always talk about getting. And Rich developed almost every foot of film the staff took this year; that was quite a few hours in the dark-room!

— Sandy, Pam and Beth. Without these three wonderful people we would have had fewer laughs and less fun putting the book together. They are as dependable as they are priceless.

— The inseparable Shep and Bim. Rob Shepard was once again a large contributor to the Cherry Tree. It was not an easy year, but proved to be challenging and rewarding. And Bob Dwyer, despite everyone's joking and kidding, deserves considerable credit for putting our name around campus.

— Nader, Mr. Camera himself! He was always there when we needed someone and his pictures are the best!

— And, by no means in order of importance, Shirley Tellier. She dazzled this editor-in-chief with her efficiency, organization and timeliness. Putting out the yearbook would have been impossible without her.

Outside of the yearbook many people deserve a warm thanks from the staff. Although they probably never realized it, the support and encouragement we received from such people as Mr. Boris Bell, Dr. Andrew Gyorgy, Vice President William Smith, Ms. Gertrude Weitzel and especially

Dr. Stephen Burks, made the going much easier and all worthwhile.

And finally, a very special thanks to everyone in Student Activities Office: Diane and Liz and Dave, for all their time and effort. And especially Thea for all the help through all the years.

Anyone who undertakes this task for two consecutive years must be attempting to prove something. The yearbook is a valuable asset to the university community and there should never be any question as to its continuance. It should not be used as a political statement or to pass judgment on anyone or on any events. The book should try to relate to everyone and not just a few. It should not require a subsidy, rather the book should be supported by those who purchase it; which, incidentally, should be the entire university community. A yearbook is a tradition and a memory, a simple book that acquires value with age.

After three years with the Cherry Tree and two years as the Editor-in-Chief, my only hope is that as I leave the yearbook, I leave it far better than when I started.

The 1976 Cherry Tree was published by Bradbury and Keller.

Thanks to Brooks and Barry for their help.

Thanks to Coy Harris for another fine year and another fine book.

I use to know this old scarecrow
He was my song
My joy and sorrow,
Cast alone between the furrows
Of a field no longer sown by anyone.
I held a dandelion
That said the time had come
To leave upon the wind
Not to return.
When summer burned the earth again.
Cultivate the freshest flower
This garden ever grew,
Beneath these branches
I once wrote such childish words for you.
But that's okay.
There's treasure children always seek to find,
And just like us
You must have had
A Once Upon A Time.

Words by Bernie Taupin
as sung by Elton John
